TRUTH AND RECONCILIATION MAWIO'MI

Head male dancer, Brady Googoo, shows off his skill during a traditional dance at the fifth annual Truth and Reconciliation Mawio'mi held at the Hank Snow Museum Grounds in Liverpool Sept. 30. Hundreds of people from along the South Shore gathered to watch and participate in traditional dances, hear from those that had experiences from residential schools and learn some traditional crafts. This year's junior head male dancer was Kaelem Omolaja; the head female dancer was Jesse Benjamin and the Jr. head female dancer was Rory Meuse. M.C. was Trevor Gould. Organizer and founder of the event is Michelle Roy.

Chester councillors to continue with controversial review of Forties boundary

By RICK CONRAD
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter
rickconradssb@gmail.com

THE FORTIES – Municipal councillors in Chester are moving ahead with a plan to ask residents of the Forties whether they want the boundaries of their community changed, in what has become a divisive issue that has simmered for more than a year.

It appears to boil down to the location of a new road sign for the community placed by the Nova Scotia government. Some New Ross residents were upset when they noticed that it apparently wasn't where it used to be.

Denise Dodge-Baker appealed to councillors in a Feb. 5, 2025, letter and then at a June 12, 2025, council meeting to respond to "many" concerns in the greater New Ross community.

In her letter, she wrote that "it was more through happenstance" that she noticed the sign for the Forties was about 4.2 kilometres east of its original location. She said she hoped it would "be corrected at the municipality's earliest convenience."

"This original signage represented an anchor and locator beacon for not just me, but most area residents, including those who were either within or outside of its signage perimeters previously or currently. As one area resident put it, 'One day, I went to work and left from my home in New Ross and when I returned from work, I now lived in the Forties.'"

At the June meeting, she asked councillors for public consultations and to do a boundary review.

"There's a lot of confusion that seems to matter to a lot of individuals within the greater New Ross location and I'm just here really to say it would be great if we could have someone facilitate an opportunity within the community to clear this up."

Warden Allen Webber asked Dodge-Baker if she ever contacted the province with her concern, since sign locations are their jurisdiction.

She said she hadn't.

The Forties is named for the original 40 lots of Crown land granted in 1819 as part of the larger military settlement, eventually known as New Ross. A 2018 staff report to Chester municipal council confirmed that the boundary follows those 40 properties along the eastern edge and then "spreads out into the surrounding rural landscape to take into account the road access in the area."

"In 2009 the (municipality's) civic address co-ordinator worked with municipal councillors for about a year to make sure these boundaries were correct. (They) were approved by council in 2010 based on the signoff from the councillors at that time."

Municipal staff is now working on a package to send to residents to vote on whether to change the boundary.

If accepted by two-thirds of property owners in the Forties, the line would move from Macks Hill, or 398 Forties Rd., to Twenty Brook. That would affect 135 properties, and make those houses a part of New Ross instead of the Forties.

So far, it appears the majority of residents don't want the boundaries to change.

According to Webber, most of the people at a public meeting in April wanted to maintain the status quo. And 212 residents signed a Sept. 11, 2025 petition calling on council to leave the boundaries alone.

Councillors have also received dozens of emails and letters from people about the issue, with many opposing a change and wondering why council continues to spend time and municipal resources on it.

But District 6 Coun. Tina Connors, who represents the New Ross area including the Forties, has kept the issue alive and says her constituents want the matter settled once and for all.

"For me, this has been on the books since I first joined council in (2012) and couldn't answer the questions of my community members who were taking the time to reach out over the years how the change took place, how it happened in 2009," she said at a Sept. 17 meeting.

"So for me again questions that I'm asked I like to be able to answer and I've not been able to provide any evidence of community engagement of property owners of impact."

She said she just wants community members to have the "say they weren't able to in 2009."

Brenda Keddy, president of the New Ross Historical Society, wrote in an email to Webber that "this seems to have gone from a boundary issue to a political issue, as it doesn't appear there is anything that can be presented to convince (Connors) or you that there is no issue here."

Keddy also spoke to councillors at their Sept. 24 meeting to emphasize that the current boundaries are historically accurate. A Facebook group has been created called The Forties, NS where Keddy and others have posted about their opposition to any change.

"Coun. Connors is trying to have you believe there was a boundary change at Lot 1, when in fact there has been none for 210 years," she said at the Sept. 24 meeting.

"Your own planning department has answered this question many times. ... The question has been asked and answered."

Webber said in an interview he's "not really 100 per cent sure" why it's become such a contentious issue locally.

"We held a specific meeting in the Forties, to hear from the community, and all we heard from the people that were present there that spoke were they didn't think it was an issue, and it should be left alone."

But Webber acknowledged that Connors has heard from others in New Ross who are concerned.

Webber says his personal opinion is that the municipality should move on and not discuss the issue any longer.

Please take notice:

On September 8, 2026, Council conducted First Reading of proposed amendments to the Osprey Village Secondary Planning Strategy and Land Use By-law affecting municipally owned land identified as PID 60631009. The proposed amendments would redesignate and rezone portions of the property from the High-Density Residential zone to General Commercial and Open Space zones. The amendments would also permit development using on-site services.

A PUBLIC INFORMATION SESSION will be held to provide residents with an opportunity to learn more about the proposed changes.

Date: October 1st, 2026

Time: 6:00-7:00 PM

Location: Council Chambers, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville

A PUBLIC HEARING will also be held regarding the proposed amendments.

Date: October 13, 2026

Time: 5:30 PM

Location: Council Chambers, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville

The public can make formal written or oral submissions to Council through the public hearing process. Written submissions will be received until 5:00 p.m. on Friday October 9, 2026, and may be submitted to April Whynot-Lohnes, Municipal Clerk, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville, NS B4V 9E4 or by email: planning@modl.ca. Oral submissions will be received at the time and place of the Hearing. Council can make a decision regarding the proposed amendments to the Osprey Village Secondary Planning Strategy and Land Use By-law affecting PID 60631009 following the Public Hearing.

Hospital patient steals vehicle from staffer

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

OCT. 2 - BRIDGEWATER - Bridgewater Police Service alleges a South Shore Regional Hospital staffer's compact sedan was stolen by a patient from the hospital. The missing vehicle was later found outside of town destroyed by fire.

While the incident occurred August 19, a suspect was only located and arrested without incident Sept. 27 in Bridgewater.

Authorities believe a 27-year-old man swiped a set of car keys at the switchboard area, exited the Bridgewater hospital, located a 2025 Volkswagen Jetta in the parking lot and drove away.

Investigators obtained documentary and photographic evidence to identify the patient. The staff member and patient did not know each other.

Hours later, Lunenburg District RCMP and fire services responded to a report of a burned-out Jetta in Hebbville. Investigators obtained a description of a person observed walking away from the car when smoke began showing. Further investigation determined that the burnt car was the vehicle reported stolen from the lot at the Bridgewater Hospital.

Bridgewater Police Service charged Jacob Troy Veinotte of Martins River with one count of motor vehicle theft. He is also charged with one count of arson related to the associated Lunenburg District RCMP investigation. He is remanded in custody pending his next appearance in Bridgewater Provincial Court, slated for Oct. 5.

The investigation is ongoing.

Fishermen lost at sea remembered

By WANDA ATKINSON
For the South Shore Bulletin

CLARK'S HARBOUR - The Clark's Harbour Fishermen's Memorial Service took place on Sunday, Sept. 27 at town hall. Clark's Harbour, Canada's most southern coastal town, is located on Cape Sable Island and has a centuries long fishing tradition.

Just behind town hall stands the Fishermen's Memorial Monument with a wooden carved fisherman sitting atop granite stone which bears the names of those lost at sea from 1900 to the present. Recent names include Joel Hopkins, lost aboard the Miss Ally and Christian Atwood lost at sea Dec. 26, 2022.

The service commenced with a roll call by the event co-ordinator followed by Mayor Clay Kenney's welcoming remarks, emphasizing the hopes, strength and courage that fishermen carry with them as they venture out to sea.

Guest speaker Paul Nelson, whose family has been deeply affected by maritime tragedies, shared poignant reflections, particularly highlighting his wife's lineage to Horatio Brannen. Brannen captained the ST Stella Maris and heroically attempted to tow the Mount Blanc away from Pier 6 during the Halifax Explosion.

The day was a time to recognize not only the names but the fathers, sons, brothers and friends whose lives are woven into the history and heart of the community, but celebrate their lives. Family members brought a wreath in remembrance and a picture of their loved one. Following the ceremony, a social gathering allowed for sharing memories and stories.

Members of the Canadian Coast Guard were also in attendance. Following the service, officers transported a wreath to sea aboard the CGC vessel Chedabucto Bay, while onlookers gathered at the West Head Wharf to observe the tribute.

International theatre troupes set to visit Liverpool for 17th festival

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

LIVERPOOL – Organizers are gearing up for this month's 17th Liverpool International Theatre Festival, as troupes from around the world take over the Astor Theatre stage for five days.

Artists from Mexico, Poland, Wales, Switzerland, Italy and the Netherlands will stage one-act plays from Oct. 14 to 18.

This edition of the biennial festival will also feature three special presentations – a film from Uganda; Bard to the Bone, a fun and informative look at Shakespeare, and a conversation with award-winning Egyptian actor and director Eslam Aswad.

The festival opens on Oct. 14 with the traditional Parade of Flags through downtown Liverpool, which will end up at the Astor, where the visiting amateur theatre groups will be introduced.

Opening night ceremonies will also feature a new musical theatre cabaret, There's Something in the Water, created for the festival

"LITF is about much more than what happens on the Astor Theatre stage," says Deborah Raddall, marketing chair for LITF 2026.

"It's the people who come here, the people who welcome them and the connections that happen when the world meets a small Nova Scotia community."

The volunteer-run event has been a Liverpool institution since 1992, with local residents opening their homes to host performers and delegates during their stay.

"You don't have to know anything about theatre to enjoy LITF," Raddall says.

"Come for a particular play, discover something you wouldn't normally see, make a day of it. Or come for the whole thing!"

Another unique part of the festival is that productions are judged by a professional adjudicator, Jennifer Scott-Reid, with award winners being crowned on the final night.

This year's JesterFish awards were created by local stained glass artist Scot Slessor.

Full festival passes and tickets to individual plays are available through the Astor Theatre box office or on Ticketpro.

Chester councillors to continue with controversial review of Forties boundary

"I'm the one who asked that we postpone it," he told councillors at their Sept. 24 meeting.

"Other than one piece of correspondence, all of it is opposed to moving forward with this: Just leave it alone, don't spend any more money, don't spend any more time. And that's the position I hold myself. We've heard from enough people, we've held the public meeting and I don't see any logic in changing the boundary."

But a motion to stop the review was defeated 4-3.

Webber says he expects staff to return to council sometime in October so they can approve the information being sent to residents, including the wording of the survey question.

He said he personally shares the frustration of those who have questioned why council is pursuing it.

"I'll just be glad when the issue is resolved. Then we can move forward and bring the community together."

If residents vote to change the boundaries, Webber says the municipality would have to apply to the province to make it happen. Municipal policy currently covers only minor adjustments to individual property boundaries.

Chester opens taps on community wells

By RICK CONRAD
Local Journalist Initiative Reporter
rickconradssb@gmail.com

CHESTER – Residents in the Municipality of Chester now have free access to safe drinking water if their own wells are compromised.

Four of seven planned community wells are operating, as part of the municipality's community wells program.

Those locations are: Western Shore Volunteer Fire Department; Grace Anglican Church, Chester Basin; East Chester Recreation Association; and the Church Memorial Park, Village of Chester.

The other three wells are set for Ross Farm, the Hubbards Fire Station and the Public Works facility on Windsor Road.

Municipal councillors voted in February to go ahead with the program to provide a community well in each electoral district. The municipality pays each group an annual hosting fee of $5,000, plus capital and operational costs.

Residents are responsible for providing their own clean containers and getting the water back home, but municipal staff are in charge of regular water testing.

It replaces Chester's bottled water distribution program, which cost $135,000 from August to December 2025. About 2,540 residents received up to four litres of water each from local grocery and convenience stores. The number of dry wells reported in the municipality last year more than doubled to 781 from 346 in 2024.

The Nova Scotia government reimbursed the municipality, but councillors heard earlier this year that that program was ending.

"We have been anticipating the completion of this project for some time," Warden Allen

Webber said in a news release.

"We no longer have to wait for a certain number of wells to go dry before offering help – help is there now for those who need it."

Webber said in an interview that he hopes the other three wells will be open to the public "before the snow flies". But at the very least, he said all seven will be operational by next summer.

The municipality also has a low-interest loan program to help residents drill new wells or replace their septic systems. It's also looking into a central water system.

The Region of Queens is also working on a community well program. At a meeting in July, staff told councillors they were still in discussions with representatives at four different sites. Councillors have not received an update since then.

Federal funding announced for King Street active transportation bridge

yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

BRIDGEWATER - Bridgewater's King Street Bridge project is moving forward with more than $760,000 in federal funding for a new multi-use path along the bridge.

The funding, announced by South Shore-St. Margarets MP Jessica Fancy, comes through the federal Active Transportation Fund and will be used to improve pedestrian and cyclist access to the King Street crossing.

The announcement follows more than three years of work after the previous bridge was washed out during Hurricane Fiona.

"I think it's fair to say with this announcement that this has been a long time coming," Fancy said during the announcement.

Fancy said the funding will support a new pathway along the existing bridge, connecting with the planned replacement of the provincial bridge, which is slated to begin construction in 2027.

The project is intended to provide a safer and more accessible route for pedestrians and cyclists travelling through the area.

For Fancy, the project also has a personal connection. Her constituency office is located on King Street.

"As a resident in Bridgewater, with a daughter who goes to Park View, she's in her final year there and has never been able to go to that school without the lights at that bridge being an issue throughout all of her years here," Fancy said.

She said that her office had received a significant number of letters from residents concerning the bridge and its condition.

"We shouldn't have had to wait as long as we did for important infrastructure that needed to be addressed," she said.

Mayor David Mitchell said the town's plans changed as it waited for the provincial bridge replacement, allowing the municipality to pursue a different approach.

The annual Harvest Service was held in the United Church, Crousetown on Wednesday evening. The Church was beautifully decorated with vegetables and flowers. Rev. MacKay, Petite Riviere, gave a very interesting address.

During the latter part of the summer holidays Miss Mona Strum, school vice-principal and two friends from Stellarton, N.S. were on a bicycle tour over Prince Edward Island, and had a most enjoyable trip. They were gone about one week and covered over 200 miles. They left Parrsboro, on to Amherst, took boat at Cape Tormentine to Borden; from Montague to Pictou. Between Summerside and Charlottetown the scenery was particularly attractive. They reported having a good time and a good tour.

The Young people's Society of the Baptist Church entertained Friday in the Sunday School Hall in honor of the English and Scotch soldiers Who were billeted for the past week at Green Shutters. The took the form of a "War Services Track Meet," in which the competitive spirit was featured throughout the evening's proceedings. The team representing the army, and by Miss Irene Ernst, carried off the honors with a total of 35 points.

"We had the temporary bridge that was washed out in the flood, and so then our funding was about, how are we going to replace this temporary bridge with a permanent walking bridge?" Mitchell said.

With the provincial bridge replacement now planned, Mitchell said the federal investment will allow the town to create an active transportation corridor alongside the new bridge.

"This funding will enable us to have a fully active transportation corridor attached to the side of that bridge," he said.

Mitchell also linked the project to the town's broader plans for economic development, including approximately 100 acres of land near Exit 12A that could eventually support thousands of jobs.

"This is more than just a bridge. This is labour mobility," he said.

Mitchell said improved connections will be increasingly important as Bridgewater works to attract and retain workers and develop new areas of the community.

The announcement underlined the importance of federal, provincial, and municipal collaboration in local capital projects.

"We do have a strong advocate for our community in Ottawa, and that is paying dividends for the residents and the businesses of this community," Mitchell said.

East Coast Credit Union celebrates grand re-opening

New building shows commitment to the community

By KEVIN MCBAIN
kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

BRIDGEWATER – Out with the old and in with the new.

The result of many months of renovation was unveiled at the East Coast Credit Union – LaHave River branch during their grand re-opening celebration Sept. 24.

Dozens of residents came to check out the new space that features a bright and welcoming interior and much more space allowing privacy for all.

Andrew Caines, has been branch manager for just over a year and said that it's a relief to be out of the trailer that they were in, while construction was going on.

"It's been a heck of a journey. I couldn't be more thrilled to be a part of this," he said. "It is truly designed to be a community hub, not just a financial institution."

Caines said that it is exciting to see this investment in his hometown.

"As a guy born and raised in this town, it's exciting to see growth and see positive changes in Bridgewater and see new opportunities for folks and we're glad to be a part of it," he said.

"The LaHave River Branch is a clear sign of our confidence in Bridgewater and the South Shore, and of our commitment to keeping local, relationship-based banking strong," said Ken Shea, president and CEO of East Coast Credit Union, in a news release.

"This is the kind of meaningful community investment we want to continue making. As we prepare to bring together East Coast, Acadian, iNova and Teachers Plus credit unions, we see an opportunity to build greater capacity to invest in our members, our employees and communities across Nova Scotia while staying true to our local roots."

The newly renovated branch offers members greater comfort, privacy and flexibility in a modern, bright and welcoming space. Sustainability features include 84 solar panels to help offset energy use, LED lighting throughout, a new heat-pump system and two EV charging stations for members.

Caines said that the big change for him was space.

"The big thing for us is we just didn't have the space. We ran out of space in the old building. This provides an opportunity for not just us to act as an institution, but to create a community space for people and it also gives us the privacy our members deserve when it comes to times when they require privacy for appointments."

ABOUT EAST COAST CREDIT UNION

East Coast Credit Union is a member-owned financial cooperative focused on putting people first. As Nova Scotia's largest credit union, we serve more than 60,000 members and manage $1.77 billion in assets, with a network spanning from Cape Breton to Bridgewater and throughout the Halifax Regional Municipality. The LaHave Credit Union merged with East Coast Credit Union in early 2024.

Liverpool to host national doubles championship

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

LIVERPOOL – Queens Place Emera Centre will host the 2027 Canadian Mixed Doubles Championship next October, the first time the event will be held in Nova Scotia.

Liverpool hosted a successful Canadian Mixed Doubles Curling Trials in December and January 2025.

This time, the curling hotbed will welcome teams from all over Canada from Oct. 25 to 31.

"When the curling community of Liverpool and Queens County tell us they're interested in hosting major curling events, we're always eager to listen and once again they made it an easy decision," Nolan Thiessen, CEO of Curling Canada, said in a news release.

"We have high hopes that the 2027 Canadian Mixed Doubles Championship will represent a significant step forward for the event, and we know that Liverpool and its outstanding host committee will do a superb job in making this a special championship."

Liverpool has hosted many big curling events over the years, including the 2019 World Junior Curling Championships and the 2014 Canadian Under-20 Curling Championships.

It will be the first time the championship will be played in the fall, with the winners going on to represent Canada at the 2028 World Mixed Doubles Championship from Jan. 8 to 15.

"The Liverpool Host Society is incredibly proud to welcome the 2027 Canadian Mixed Doubles Championship," said Greg Thorbourne, chairman of the Liverpool Championship Host Society.

"Our community has a proven track record of successfully hosting outstanding curling events, and our dedicated volunteers are excited to once again come together to showcase Liverpool and warmly welcome athletes, coaches, officials, and fans from across Canada."

Region of Queens Mayor Scott Christian said the host society has "worked tirelessly" to establish Queens County as a world-class curling destination.

"We can't wait to welcome athletes and fans from across Canada back to Queens Place and show them once again what makes our community such a special place to compete."

Fourteen member association champions will compete against qualifying teams from the Canadian mixed doubles rankings. Curling Canada plans to release more information on the field and format at a later date.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK
OCTOBER 4-10, 2026

Signs a fireplace is in need of repair

Fireplaces are most heavily used during winter, when temperatures outside are less inviting and few activities sound more appealing than huddling up indoors around a warm fire. As winter winds down, a season of heavy use can take its toll on a fireplace, making spring an ideal time to inspect these popular features for damage.

The American Heritage Insurance Group notes that neglect of chimneys and fireplaces can pose a range of notable dangers, including increased risk for carbon monoxide poisoning and chimney fires. Poorly maintained fireplaces also may fail prematurely, which is not insignificant, as a new fireplace can cost thousands of dollars. With so much to gain from a well-maintained fireplace, homeowners can learn to spot signs suggesting a unit is in need of repair.

• Insufficiently vented smoke: Smoke from a fireplace is meant to go up and out of a home through the chimney. If that's not happening, and smoke is instead entering living spaces, then a fireplace and chimney inspection is in order. When such situations unfold, the chimney may be blocked or a damper may be damaged. Such issues are easily and often affordably resolved. But smoke coming into a home also might indicate structural damage to the chimney or fireplace, which can be a more costly fix.

• Foul odors: Fireplace afficionados tend to love the smoky aroma that emanates from the fixtures while a fire is burning. If that familiar aroma has been overtaken by a foul odor, then there might be a buildup of creosote within the chimney. The United States Environmental Protection Agency notes creosote is a derivative of the distillation of tar from wood or coal. Though creosote is a byproduct of burning wood, if it's allowed to accumulate over time, the risk of chimney fires increases considerably. A foul odor coming from the fireplace, particularly when it's not in use, is a sign of excessive creosote buildup, which necessitates immediate remediation.

• Water damage: Water damage, which can manifest as rust or dampness around the fireplace or chimney, is another sign a fireplace is in need of repair. Water damage often indicates that water is getting inside. Sometimes that's due to a faulty chimney cap, which is a simple and affordable repair. Other times it could indicate issues with the masonry, which requires a more costly fix.

• Diminished warmth: If cuddling up around the fireplace isn't quite as cozy as it used to be, that drop in warmth could indicate issues with airflow or suggest the buildup of creosote. Diminished warmth around a lit fireplace should be brought to the attention of a fireplace professional immediately.

These are not the only potential indicators that a fireplace is in need of repair. Physical signs like cracks or loose masonry and even unusual noises like cracking sounds also indicate repairs might be necessary.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK Oct. 4-10, 2026

Did you know?

Electrical fires are more common than one might think. The Electrical Safety Foundation says home electrical fires account for an estimated 51,000 fires each year, nearly 500 deaths, and more than 1,400 injuries. Certain conditions can lead to electrical home fires. The National Fire Protection Association indicates home fires can result from overloading electrical outlets and inadequate distribution of lighting equipment. When this occurs, these fires most often originate in a bedroom. Another common cause of electrical home fires is faulty wiring and related equipment malfunction. It is important for homeowners to be aware of potential electrical issues and remedy them quickly to avoid home fires. Ensuring electrical systems are up to code and addressing issues with the help of a qualified electrician can reduce the risk of electrical fires.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK 2026 IS OCTOBER 4th-10th!

Lithium-Ion Battery Safety

- Inspect for damage: Regularly check for cracks or broken cases.
- Use proper equipment: Use the charger that came with the device and never overcharge.
- Charge in a safe location: Choose a flat, dry, open area away from flammable materials and direct sunlight.
- Never leave charging unattended: Avoid charging devices while sleeping or away from the area.
- Avoid extreme temperatures: Keep batteries in cool, dry places and away from heat sources.
- Store batteries properly: Keep spare batteries and devices in a cool, dry environment, away from anything that can burn.
- For travel: Do not put lithium-ion batteries in checked luggage; keep them with you on the plane.

Call emergency services immediately: Always have a plan for what to do in case of a fire, including knowing how to alert emergency responders.

Importance of Fire Prevention

In a fire, mere seconds can mean the difference between a safe escape and a tragedy. Fire safety education isn't just for school children. Today's fires burn faster and hotter than those of the past. Teenagers, adults, and the elderly are also at risk in fires, making it important for every member of the community to take some time every October during Fire Prevention Week to be aware and practice fire safety.

- Check your Smoke Detectors Regularly
- Change your batteries when you change your clock ahead and back.
- Have a fire safety plan, two ways out and a meeting place.

Allergic to cats? You may not have to give up on the purr

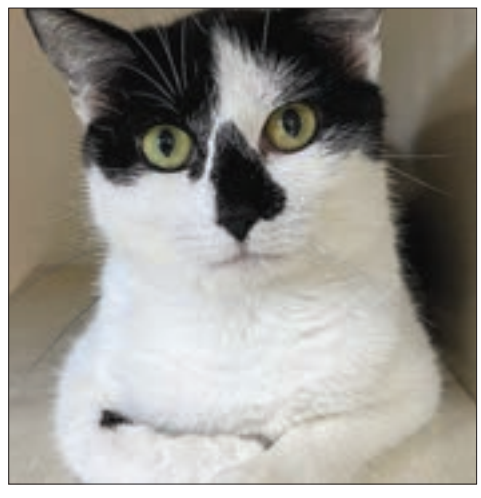

ASHLEY KIPPERS
SHAID Tree Animal Shelter General Manager

For people who love cats but experience the occasional sneeze, itchy eyes, or stuffy nose around them, the idea of sharing a home with a feline can seem like a difficult proposition. Fortunately, mild cat allergies don't necessarily mean you have to give up on the idea of having a cat. There are several strategies that may help reduce the amount of allergen in your home.

First, it helps to understand what you're actually reacting to. Cat allergies aren't caused simply by cat hair. Cats produce several allergens, with Fel d 1 being the major cat allergen. It is produced primarily in a cat's saliva and skin glands and gets transferred to the coat when a cat grooms itself. The allergen can then spread through the home on hair and dander. There is also no truly "hypoallergenic" breed of cat – all cats produce allergens.

A different approach: Allergen-reducing cat food

One interesting development in managing cat allergies is nutrition. Purina Pro Plan LiveClear is specifically formulated to reduce the major allergen in cat hair and dander.

Meet August, a lovely two-year-old girl who is still waiting for her forever home.

The food contains a protein sourced from eggs that binds to and neutralizes Fel d 1 in a cat's saliva. According to Purina's published research, cats fed the diet daily showed an average 47% reduction in active Fel d 1 on their hair and dander beginning around the third week of feeding, with 97% of cats in the study showing a decrease.

This doesn't make a cat allergy disappear, and it isn't a substitute for medical treatment, but it can be one useful part of an overall strategy. An allergist featured by the American College of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology recently described allergen-reducing cat food as something that can be used alongside other approaches to help people manage cat allergies.

Other ways to make living with a cat easier

If someone in your household has mild allergies, a few simple changes can make a difference:

• Make the bedroom a cat-free zone. Keeping allergens out of the room where you spend many hours sleeping can provide a valuable lower-allergen space.

• Use a HEPA air purifier, particularly in bedrooms and other rooms where you spend a lot of time.

• Vacuum regularly using a vacuum equipped with a HEPA or high-efficiency filter.

• Wash hands after petting your cat, especially before touching your face or eyes.

• Wash bedding and other washable fabrics regularly, since allergens can accumulate on household surfaces.

• Consider hard flooring or washable rugs in areas where allergens tend to accumulate.

• Have someone without allergies handle grooming and litter-box cleaning when possible.

Alternatives to anger

SUSANNE BECK
Reality Check

Last time, I wrote about Dr. Glasser's rather unusual way of discussing emotional states. He suggests that we use language that reflects that we have choices, such as, "I am choosing to be anxious," rather than "I am anxious." It's a subtle but meaningful difference. When we say, "I am choosing this," then we are also recognizing our ability to follow up with, "But I could choose differently."

Emotions are valuable. Love, joy, serenity; they all enhance our lives. However, you know as well as I do that some emotions, such as anger, can contribute to our misery rather than our satisfaction.

Angry attacks can damage relationships beyond repair. Even when we don't display our anger but simply carry it within us, anger can displace the joy in our lives.

This is not to suggest that anger is never useful, or that it's unjustified or purposeless. Not at all. But let's consider a situation where we're angry, (or "angering," as Glasser might say), we know it's not helping and it may actually be harming us. If we would like to rid ourselves of it, or at least reduce its impact, what can we do?

It's easy enough to say, "I am choosing to be angry; now I will choose something else." Easy to say; not so easy to do.

But we have doable options. An effective first step toward solving many problems is to ask ourselves sincerely, what do I really want? Do I want to let go of my anger? You don't have to tell me or anyone else, but it's helpful to at least be honest with yourself.

You may want to choose anger. If someone has hurt you and you are still seething, you may as well accept that you want to be angry for a while and live with it. We can be angry without letting it bother or control us.

A good read: The Story of Birds

JAMES HIRTLE
Bird Notes

I recently finished reading, The Story of Birds, by Steve Brusatte. This is a book that describes the history of birds from their dinosaur origins to the present.

It was a good book, but a slow read for me. I therefore will say that it explains and shows evidence from the fossil records and DNA analysis of the evolution of birds to the birds of today. If you are further interested in this, I would recommend getting the book.

The book also goes into some details of how man was responsible for the extinction of 1,500 species of birds. At the end of the book, it delves into how birds are declining at a rapid rate. The statistics provided were from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

It states that 3.2 billion birds needlessly die each year within the borders of the United States. Many of these birds are slayed by cats.

In fact, 2.4 billion birds each year are killed by cats. Another billion birds fall from the skies due to flying into buildings with transparent glass windows. Large numbers of raptors and owls die each year due to eating rodents laced with pesticides.

Another 200 million birds die each year due to being hit by cars. Another 72 million die due to being poisoned by pollution. A staggering number 30 million are snared and electrocuted on power lines. The last numbers, around a hundred thousand, get clipped by wind turbines.

A palm warbler caught on camera in Jubilee Park in Mahone Bay Sept. 27.

It is not all bad news. Birds historically have been shown to be survivors and we have saved many species from extinction. Once we realized that DDT was an issue we were able to bring many species back from close to being wiped out. California condors and bald eagles are an example.

California condors had dropped to a few dozen individuals and bald eagles to a few hundred breeding pairs. A bald eagle had been a rare site in Illinois in the late 1980s and early 1990s. Now they have bounced back in large numbers. This is a story that showed up everywhere in the United States. We also now have a large bald eagle population in Nova Scotia.

Paul MacDonald explained the migration patterns of wood ducks in Nova Scotia. He also reminded me of how this species was in decline and is now bouncing back nicely.

As mentioned by Paul, "They made a great comeback from very low numbers and are quite plentiful now." The wood duck does have an unusual migration pattern. As quoted from Paul, "they fly north. Birds raised in the Carolina's are in Nova Scotia now and then they fly south after a short visit with us. Birds in Quebec fly east to Nova Scotia and then go south."

I was told about a leucistic blue jay in Riverport. The one that had been there over the winter had been taken by a cat, so this was a new bird there. Over the past 10 years there has been a lecistic blue jay in Riverport every year. This is an unusual number to show up at one location.

So, I got to thinking as to whether the genes for leucism could be passed on to another generation. Kathleen MacAulay replied to my query on this. "White plumage in birds is often the result of a genetic mutation that can be inherited by their offspring. These pop up occasionally in any population and people have taken advantage of this to produce white domestic turkeys, doves, ducks etc."

On Sept. 24 Miguel Morales spotted six ruddy turnstones at the end of Bear Trap Road in Broad Cove. Robert Keereweer sighted a blackpoll warbler on Graves Island. On Sept. 25 Mark Dennis watched large numbers of northern gannets, some Cory's shearwaters and great shearwaters off of Daniel's Head on Cape Sable Island. On Sept. 26 Kevin Lantz watched dozens of great shearwaters off Hell's Point in Kingsburg. Mark Dennis sighted a great skua off Baccaro on this day.

On Sept. 24 a black-bellied whistling duck showed up in Truro as reported by Jason Dain. Logan LaLonde discovered a Swainson's hawk on Brier Island. On Sept. 25 Jason Dain found a Barnacle goose at the Fundy Discovery Site in Truro. The white ibis was still present in Cape Breton at the time of writing.

Birds located in Cape Breton since the last column were northern waterthrush and dunlin. Halifax Municipality had northern waterthrush, pied-billed grebe, sooty shearwaters, great shearwaters and black-legged kittiwakes, white-crowned sparrow and Philadelphia vireo.

The Northeast mainland saw a white-crowned sparrow. The Northwest mainland a snow goose, greater white-fronted goose and yellow-headed blackbird.

In Yarmouth and Digby Counties there were brown thrasher, Carolina wren, lark sparrow, Canada warbler, prominent movements of sharp-sinned hawks and American kestrels, Bonaparte's gull, horned larks, Lapland longspur, hundreds of broad-winged hawks, glossy ibis, Ipswich sparrow, common nighthawk, white-crowned sparrows, blue-gray gnatcatcher, mourning warbler, northern waterthrush, parasitic jaegers, Tennessee warbler, Wilson's warblers, blackpoll warblers, large numbers of common yellowthroats and swamp sparrows, orange-crowned warblers, Cape May warblers, eastern warbling vireo and five great egrets.

For the Valley, two rusty blackbirds, Tennessee warbler and white-crowned sparrows.

What are your customers fixing for themselves?

STEPHANIE MILLER VINCENT
Business Moments

There's a sign making the rounds online that made me laugh out loud and then made me wince.

It's pretending to be a luxury hotel card, with gold lettering, a fancy crest and elegant script. The title is "Your Nightly Room Correction," and underneath is a checklist for guests to complete before bed.

Things like; find two pant hangers and clip the blackout curtains together, roll a bath towel against the bottom of the door to block the hallway light, cover every glowing dot in the room: the TV, the thermostat, the smoke detector, the phone charger, turn the bedside lamp to face the wall, put in your earplugs, adjust the thermostat, then adjust it again at 2:17 a.m.

You laughed didn't you? The card is satire, of course. Everyone who has ever stayed in a hotel knows every item on that list, because we've all done it. You've stood in a dark room in your socks, wrestling a curtain that won't quite close, wondering why it's your job to fix the room you just paid for.

Here's the worse part. The next morning, housekeeping comes in and puts everything back. The curtains are unclipped, the towel is picked up and the lamp is turned back around. The room is reset to exactly the way it was, ready for the next guest to fix all over again.

Nobody in that story is doing a bad job. The room attendant is following the standard to the letter. The system is working perfectly. It's just listening to the wrong voice.

The guest is talking. Not on a comment card or in a survey, but through what they do when nobody is watching. Stranger after stranger, night after night, is making the same corrections. When that happens, it stops being personal preference. It becomes design feedback.

And you don't need a hotel for this to be true.

Think about your own business for a minute. Is there a regular who always drags a chair from one table to another because the one by the window wobbles? Do customers ask for the Wi-Fi password every single visit because it isn't posted anywhere? Is there a door everyone gives an extra shoulder because it sticks in wet weather? Does someone always ask for the music to be turned down, or a colder drink, or a spot out of the draft?

Every workaround a customer invents is a note they've left for you. Most of us just never read it.

The reason usually isn't that owners don't care. It's that the people who see the pattern are rarely the people who make the decisions. Your server notices the wobbly table on every shift. Your front counter hears the Wi-Fi question 20 times a day.

Your cleaner knows exactly which chair ends up in the wrong spot every night. But there's no moment in their day where anyone asks them what they're seeing, so the observation dies right there, on the cart or behind the counter.

So this week, skip the customer survey. Walk the floor, find the people who close up, clean up and reset your space, and ask them one question:

"What do you keep putting back?"

Then listen. Write the answers down. You'll likely hear the same two or three things from everyone, and some will be fixes that cost less than a lunch order.

Pick one and fix it. Then, and this is the step most of us skip, go back and tell your team, "We fixed that because you told us."

That sentence does two things at once. Your customers get a better experience, and your staff learn that what they see matters. People stay where they feel their eyes and ears are valued. They leave places where they're treated like hands that only reset the room.

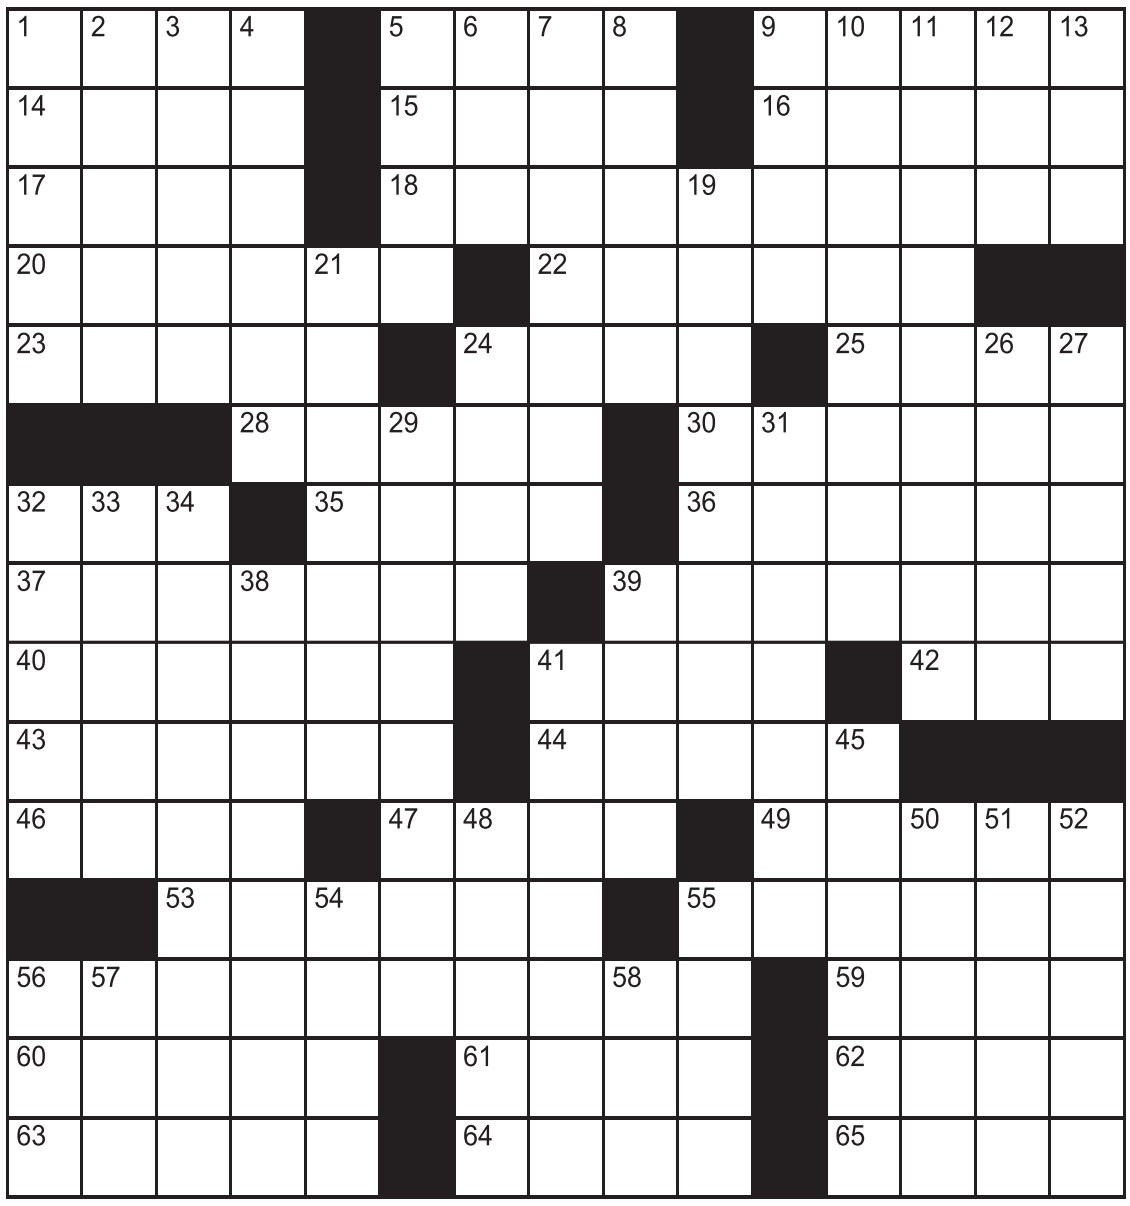

Your customers are already telling you what they want, and your team is already holding the evidence. The only question is whether anyone is asking.

OBITUARIES

Elizabeth “Liz” Pauline Nickerson

It is with heavy hearts that the family of Elizabeth “Liz” Pauline Nickerson, 86, of Bayport, announces her peaceful passing at home, surrounded by the love of her family, on Friday, September 25, 2026. Born in Bayport, she was a beloved daughter of the late Kermit and Pauline (Tanner) Himmelman.

Liz began her working career at Riverport Seafoods working in the fish plant. She later worked her way up to the office. She even travelled with the company and was sent to train new staff. Many will remember her as a waitress at her favourite spot, Zellers Diner, where she worked until stepping away to care for her aging parents.

Liz loved to fish more than anything. She would spend countless hours at Kraut Point Wharf with her best friend Debbie Bush and many others. She would jump at any opportunity to go on any boat and especially with her grandson Captain Glenn Freeman to try to catch some big ones.

The Riverport Rum Runners Sea Festival was always the highlight of her summers and she never missed one. Her walls were lined with plaques from winning for biggest groundfish and senior fisherwomen categories to name a few.

Travel was definitely her second favourite thing to do. she was lucky to see many parts of the world through cruises, adventures exploring new countries and states and spending many winters in Florida soaking up the sun. She made friends wherever she went and kept in touch with many she met on her trips.

Her love of animals was a source of happiness throughout her life. She had many pets, but her sweet cat Mousie was with her for 18 years. Then came Mickey her 1 Yr old Devon Rex and lastly her new love and soul kitty Scooby her cherished Devon Rex kitten she got just after Christmas last year.

Liz is lovingly remembered by her children, Janice (Donald) Freeman of Bayport, Linda (Mike) Savory of Pinegrove, and Andrew Oxner of Lower LaHave; her sister, Mona (Jacques) Lecavalier of Cantley, Quebec; her cherished grandchildren, Glenn (Roxanne) Freeman, David (Yagmur) Freeman, Nathan Herritt, Colin (Lindsay) Herritt, Devin Herritt, Shaylyn (Denis) Oxner, Tia Oxner, Drew Oxner, and Luke Oxner; as well as several special great-grandchildren, nieces, and nephews.

In addition to her parents, Liz was predeceased by her daughter, Joan, in childhood. Her first husband and father of her children Raymond Oxner as well as a son in law Thomas Nickerson.

The family wishes to send many thanks to the South Shore Palliative team of nurses and doctors and VON for their exceptional care and compassion. Without whom we could not have kept her wish to remain at home and comfortable.

We also want to thank her special girls Granddaughter in law Roxanne Freeman and Cait Garland. The love and amazing care you gave her was exceptional and we truly could not have done this without you by our side. The love and laughter that you surrounded her with in her last days was beautiful. She loved you both dearly.

Cremation has taken place. A graveside memorial service was held at 11:00 am on Friday, October 2, 2026, at the Bayport Cemetery, with Rev. Willis Ott officiating. Arrangements have been entrusted to Personal Care Cremations & Memorial Services.

In honour of Liz’s deep love for animals, memorial donations to the SHAID Tree Animal Shelter would be greatly appreciated by the family.

Margaret “Peggy” Townsend

In loving memory of Margaret “Peggy” Townsend, age 42, Londonderry, NS.

It is with profound sadness that we announce the passing of Peggy Townsend, born in Yarmouth, NS, who peacefully passed away on September 30, 2026, surrounded by the love of her family and friends after a courageous battle with cancer.

Peggy was a remarkable woman whose strength and determination and generous spirit touched the lives of so many. She was not only a beloved mother, daughter, sister, aunt, and friend; but also a proud successful business owner. Through her passion and dedication, she built a successful dog grooming business, creating a career she loved and a business that reflected her caring and genuine love for animals.

Outside of her work, Peggy found some of her greatest happiness in the outdoors. She loved being surrounded by nature, enjoying the fresh air, fishing and making the most of the simple beauty life had to offer. Whether she was spending time outdoors, sharing a laugh with friends or gathered around with family, she treasured the moments that brought people together.

Family and friends were at the heart of Peggy’s life. She loved deeply and gave freely of herself, always making time for the people who mattered the most. She created countless memories through family gatherings, friendships, conversations, laughter and adventures that will be cherished forever.

Throughout her battle, Peggy faced each day with incredible courage and strength. Her journey was not an easy one, but she continued to show the same determination and love for life that had always defined her.

She leaves behind, along with many friends, clients and loved ones, her loving family; her children, Bastion and Ophelia; her mother, Beth, Halifax, NS; her brothers, Edwin (Monica), Halifax, NS, Chris, King City, ON; her sister, Tricia (Kevin), Grande Prairie, AB; her nieces, Brittany (Andrew), Hatchet Lake, NS and Danielle, Halifax, NS; great nephews and a great niece. She was predeceased by her father, Bert.

Although she is no longer with us, her love, laughter, kindness and the memories she created will remain forever in the hearts of these who knew her.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Truro SPCA.

There will be no visitation or funeral service. A Celebration of Life will be held at a future date. Arrangements have been entrusted to Colchester Community Funeral Home, 512 Willow St., Truro, NS. Online condolences may be made at www.ColchesterCommunity.com

Allergic to cats?

• If symptoms continue, talk with your doctor or an allergist about appropriate allergy medications or immunotherapy.

The goal isn’t necessarily to eliminate every trace of cat allergen – that would be a pretty tall order when your roommate has four paws and a grooming schedule! Instead, the goal is to reduce overall exposure enough that both human and feline members of the household can live comfortably together.

MEET AUGUST

This week, we’d like to introduce you to August, a lovely two-year-old girl who is still waiting for her forever home.

August has an independent spirit and enjoys doing things at her own pace. When she first arrives somewhere new, she may need a little time to settle in and understand that she is safe. She’s looking for a patient and understanding family who will give her the time and space she needs rather than expecting her to become an instant best friend.

Once August feels comfortable, her personality begins to shine. Her new family will have the wonderful experience of watching that trust develop day by day and discovering more of the sweet companion underneath.

At SHAID, we know that finding the right home isn’t about finding any home. It’s about understanding each animal’s individual personality and needs and finding a family where both sides can thrive. The patience and care provided while animals wait for those matches is made possible through the support of our community.

If you’re looking for a sweet, independent companion and understand that good things sometimes take a little time, August may be waiting for you.

And if adoption isn’t right for you, there are many other ways to help animals like August, through fostering, volunteering, donations, fundraising, or simply spreading the word about pets looking for homes.

On the other hand, you may decide that you’ve been angry long enough and you’d rather experience the freedom and peace of being anger-free.

Once you are clear on what you want, you can create a plan of action. What will you do now? What will you do differently?

If you’ve decided that you want to continue with anger, I’d suggest that you include a timeframe in your plan. For example, I’m going to be angry for the next month, and then I am done with it. Or I’ll re-evaluate whether I still want to choose anger.

But perhaps you’ve decided that you want to quit the anger. How would you do that? Changing thoughts or actions is more effective than attempting to change the angry feeling directly. Thus, a plan could include: when I feel angry, I will listen to cheering, calming music. I will phone a friend. I will memorize and recite an inspirational verse. I will take a walk. I will count to 1,000. Backwards. By threes.

Granted, all options aren’t available to us all the time. If your manager is giving you grief, it’s impractical to say, “I’m choosing to walk on the beach now.” However, even then, we have choices. We can choose our thoughts. We can choose to accept the anger or not. If we do keep it, we have another choice: to express the anger or keep it to ourselves.

New skills take practice. Is it worthwhile? Consider this bonus: Along with self-discipline comes personal freedom. When you can conduct yourself deliberately, then you are not so easily controlled by impulse or external influences. Is it worth the effort? That’s your choice.

Do you believe we can choose alternatives to anger? Let me know at choice@focusonclarity.com or by mail c/o South Shore Bulletin.

To your choices! ~ Susanne ~
