South Shore Regional Hospital redevelopment officially opens

BRIDGEWATER – The new-look South Shore Regional Hospital (built in 1988) was officially opened Oct. 6 with Premier Tim Houston on hand to officially cut the ribbon.

The new emergency room opened the following day at 6 a.m. and people could access it using the new East entrance, just a short distance from the old entrance that was simultaneously closed and work has begun on re-purposing that space.

The new renal dialysis unit and the new endoscopy suite will open in the coming weeks.

With the new space, the hospital's footprint grew by more than 30 per cent with the new construction that includes a new emergency department, four-bay ambulance garage, upgraded endoscopy space and a renal dialysis unit, to go along with a new MRI suite that was opened earlier this year.

Para player's dream comes true

Pine Grove resident makes Team Canada roster

By KEVIN MCBAIN
kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

PINE GROVE – Jiesheng Boutilier has been playing para hockey for the past 10 years with one simple goal in mind, make the Team Canada roster one day.

He has made that dream come true.

Boutilier, 18, a member of the South Shore I.C.E Storm and Team Atlantic, will wear the maple leaf in Czechia at the International Para Hockey Cup held in Nymburk at the five-team tournament being held from Oct. 20 to 26.

A team selection camp was held in Surrey, B.C. Sept. 20 to 25.

"It's definitely cool for sure. There's some big names on the roster like Tyler McGregor I will be playing with," he said, adding that he is the youngest player on the roster and understands that the playing time may be limited.

"I want to show what I can do and help the team anyway I can. I don't care if they tell me that you're sitting. I will be the loudest fan in the crowd. Whatever is needed. I will do whatever they wanted. Even if I'm sitting there on the bench, watching the systems in action ... I will be able to see these systems on the ice which will help me better understand."

Boutilier started playing the sport in 2016 and got more involved in the Team Canada stream in 2022, attending the occasional training camp and game here and there.

Dave Waters was founder and long-time coach who mentored Boutilier since the beginning of his career, could not say enough about him as a player and just as a person.

"From a character perspective and as a human being, you would be hard-pressed to find a better person. I think he exemplifies what it is to be a good human. I think he's got a phenomenal personality. I think he understands how to do things the right way. Not only with integrity, but humility and an understanding, not just the importance of what something like this means to him, but what it means to the general population," he said.

"He was ideal for the sport. It was recognized minute one and he clearly took that and ran with it the right way. I don't think that should be understated. It's an important factor in para sport.

"He was built to be a para hockey player. If you were going to go out and say to yourself, what kind of physical make-up, what kind of personality, what kind of level of intelligence and what kind of heart would I need for the ideal para hockey player, he had it all from minute one and it was recognized."

Pine Grove's Jiesheng Boutilier was recently named to the Team Canada para hockey roster and will compete in his first tournament in Czechia this week.

It may seem like a long process to many and Boutilier said that he saw many players come and go, but Boutilier says that he is proud that he stuck it out and worked hard to get to where he is.

"Just for me knowing that I stuck around long enough. I did a lot of training these past four years, especially and making the team was my goal," he said. "This year, with all the feedback that I've received from the players I've trained with and through testing results, these were signs that I might have a chance this year."

He said that during team linear testing, referring to evaluations that measure speed, acceleration and stroke mechanics while skating in a straight line, he finished first on the team during tryouts in Surrey.

Boutilier, a graduate of Park View Education Centre, is now a first-year kinesiology student at Acadia. When asked about balancing school with hockey, he admits that it may be a bit tough, but he is confident that he can be successful.

He mentioned that his professor has been a good help and he has been allowed to take a reduced course load to make things a bit lighter. He was also happy with the Team Canada approach.

"The way they told me was kind of cool. We just finished our last practice of the week (in Surrey). We were sitting down and I hear behind me, 'hey Bouts can we talk to you for a second?'"

He looked behind him and Forrest and Adam were sitting at a table in the corner. He goes over to them... "We would like to put you on the roster, but we don't want to mess up your school. 'You let us know.'"

"I think it was kind of cool that they showed value me not just as a player, but as a person."

Why para hockey? He has been playing since 2016.

"It has built up my confidence. I pretty much grew up in a wheelchair, watching the other kids play basketball and floor hockey, while stuck in one," he said. "Once I started para hockey, I decided why stop here. Once I was able to walk, I started playing basketball and other sports. I wasn't the worst."

He also added that being a part of the team was also a big step in his becoming more social as well.

In preparation for upcoming tournaments, Boutilier says that the team meets once a week via Zoom to discuss systems and strategy, while Hockey Canada puts in some money to pay for ice time at the nearest arena and they strongly encourage all of their players to get out on the ice as much as possible.

The team leaves for Czechia today (Oct. 14) and will practise twice before opening the tournament against the U.S. on Oct. 18. They will play the World Selects Oct. 19. They will also play Czechia on Oct. 21. Semifinals will be Oct. 23 and medal games on Oct. 24.

South Shore Regional Hospital redevelopment officially opens

The overall cost of the project was more than $115 million. The Health Services Foundation of the South Shore and its Brighter Days campaign contributed $10.8 million to the cause.

Nova Scotia Premier Tim Houston was on hand for the event and was the first of several speakers to take to the podium. Lunenburg MLA Susan Corkum-Greek emceed the event.

"This is a real special moment, not just one milestone hit, but a number of milestones to be honest," he said. "Today's really special. The government can be part of it, but government can't do it all. We're very blessed in this area to have the foundation and the auxiliary. Thank you...for your efforts and persistence in making this happen...it will help in so many ways."

He added that the auxiliary is the largest in the province.

Ben Carver, board chair of the South Shore Regional Health Foundation, was ecstatic.

"It's been a dream, a vision for more than a decade. The community stepped up in a major way. We had very dedicated capital campaign chairs in David Himmelman and Tim O'Regan, but more than that we had so many donors come forward, people from every walk of live giving gifts big and small and it's made all the difference," he said.

"Obviously, there's a need for this, but hopefully this will also make it easier to attract new doctors. Having a facility like this, which is first class, makes a big difference."

Dr. Nicole Boutilier, CEO with Nova Scotia Health commented, "Were really filled with anticipation. Tomorrow has been years in the making for the people that you see around here – staff, physicians and volunteers have worked tirelessly. The journey is not over."

SIRT clears Bridgewater officer in crash investigation

SOUTH SHORE BULLETIN STAFF

BRIDGEWATER – OCT. 5 - The Serious Incident Response Team (SIRT) cleared an off-duty Bridgewater Police Service officer of any criminal involvement linked to an Upper Tantallon crash.

SIRT, independent police oversight agency, concluded no reasonable grounds existed to believe a criminal offence occurred.

Evidence, including civilian dashcam footage, confirmed the pedestrian unexpectedly stepped onto Highway 103 into the path of the officer's personal vehicle.

RCMP immediately referred the case to SIRT because an off-duty officer was involved in the March 26, 2026 collision.

"This was a tragic incident that greatly affected an off-duty member of our police service," said Danny MacPhee, deputy chief, Bridgewater Police Service, in this release. "Our officers experience tragedy like everyone else. We have supported them throughout this process. The independent review and subsequent findings will provide a level of closure."

Our thoughts are with the deceased man's family and everyone affected by this loss, MacPhee said.

"We recognize the public's need for absolute trust and accountability, which is why an independent, external investigation by SIRT was immediately triggered to ensure a thorough and unbiased review of the facts," he noted.

ORIGINAL PRESS RELEASE - FROM MARCH 28.

The Serious Incident Response Team (SIRT) is investigating a motor vehicle accident that resulted in the death of an adult male, near Tantallon.

Preliminary information suggests:

On the night of Saturday March 28, 2026, an adult male was walking on the side of Highway 103 near Tantallon, where he was struck by a vehicle.

RCMP responded to the 911 call.

The driver of the vehicle was identified as an off-duty Bridgewater Police officer.

Alcohol does not appear to be a factor.

The male was pronounced deceased shortly after the accident.

Anyone driving on highway 103 near Exit 5 to Tantallon, between 11:00pm and midnight on March 28 with dashcam footage, photos, or other information is asked to contact SiRT directly by emailing sirt.tips@novascotia.ca.

SiRT is responsible for investigating all matters that involve death, serious injury, sexual assault and intimate partner violence or other matters of a public interest that may have arisen from the actions of any police officer, on or off duty, in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick. Investigations are under the direction and control of an independent civilian director, who has the sole authority to determine if charges should be laid at the conclusion of an investigation. Bridgewater Police Service seizes shotgun, local man faces firearm offences

BRIDGEWATER - Bridgewater Police Service officers discovered a pump action shotgun and a suite of ammunition while responding to a medical assist call on the west side of town.

On Monday, Oct. 5 at about 2:30 p.m., paramedics and Bridgewater Police Service officers were summoned to a Dufferin Street business address in response to an adult male outside appearing to be in medical distress.

Arriving police officers believed the man was under the influence of alcohol or drugs and took him into custody. The man had belongings contained in various bags. As police began gathering up bags, one officer noticed the stock of a long gun in plain view.

No one was hurt.

Police seized a number of shotgun shells, a black 12-gauge shotgun, among other items of evidentiary value.

As a result, a 39-year-old Lunenburg County resident will be charged with unsafe storage of a firearm, possession of a weapon for a dangerous purpose, possession of a weapon without a licence and possession of a prohibited weapon or a restricted weapon with ammunition.

The suspect was released on court-ordered conditions and is due to appear Dec. 16 in provincial court in Bridgewater. He cannot be named because charge documents have not yet been filed with the court.

The investigation is ongoing.

Anyone with information pertaining to this incident is asked to contact Bridgewater Police Service at 902-543-2464.

RCMP charges man after assault in Conquerall Bank

She later left the property and called for help.

When officers arrived at the home, the man had barricaded himself inside the residence. Additional resources, including the RCMP Emergency Response Team and RCMP Police Dog Services, attended to assist.

At approximately 8 a.m., the man exited the home and was safely arrested. He's charged with five offences, including Assault, Assault Causing Bodily Harm, and Failure to Comply with Undertaking.

The man appeared in Bridgewater Provincial Court on Oct. 2. He remains in custody and was scheduled to re-appear today, Oct. 5.

Be the Peace marks 10 years of work to prevent gender-based violence

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

SOUTH SHORE - 10 years after its founding, the Be the Peace Institute is going beyond crisis response to work on underlying systems and social conditions that perpetuate the epidemic of gender-based violence in Nova Scotia.

The institute, which is located on the South Shore and serves the province, was founded in 2015 after a three-year community project that aimed to coordinate a joint response to gender-based violence.

Project and resource co-ordinator Stacey Godsoe said the organization has mainly focused on official responses to violence, such as the criminal justice system, shelters and crisis services.

"We were really looking at the crisis-response end of things," Godsoe said, including the legal response and the need for shelter beds.

But the institute soon discovered that it was difficult to change such systems and that it had to look further upstream.

It was time to focus on prevention and the social attitudes that can normalize violence, including traditional gender roles, misogyny, and discrimination.

The organization's founders, Sue Bookchin and others, had first listened to survivors. "They heard their stories, and it was from their stories that the organization began to build relationships with police, community justice groups, schools, faith communities, mental health and addictions services, and many others."

Bookchin points out that at the time the institute was established, there was very little Nova Scotia-specific research on gender-based violence.

A decade later, the organization's response has improved. Bookchin cited the introduction of specialist domestic violence courts in Bridgewater, Sydney, and Halifax, the establishment of independent legal advice for sexual assault survivors, the expansion of sexual violence trauma therapists, and the creation of a sexual assault nurse examiner program.

FILE PHOTO

A Be the Peace awareness run was held through the South Shore recently, with members stopping at several communities and schools sharing their message of peace.

New curriculum outcomes related to gender-based violence have also been introduced from Primary to Grade 12, something the institute has advocated for over the past decade.

A second source of progress, as well, is the development of responses to acts of violence, rather than the prevention of such actions.

"There are new curriculum outcomes in schools from Primary to Grade 12, which is brand new, that we have been advocating for a decade," Bookchin said. "But there are challenges because teachers are not prepared to teach this curriculum or have these very sensitive conversations with young people."

Provincially, there have been several reports containing recommendations on the prevention of gender-based violence, including the Mass Casualty Commission's report following the April 20, 2020, mass shooting in Nova Scotia and a fatality inquiry in Antigonish in 2017.

The reports have provided much of the blueprint for change, but the implementation has been limited.

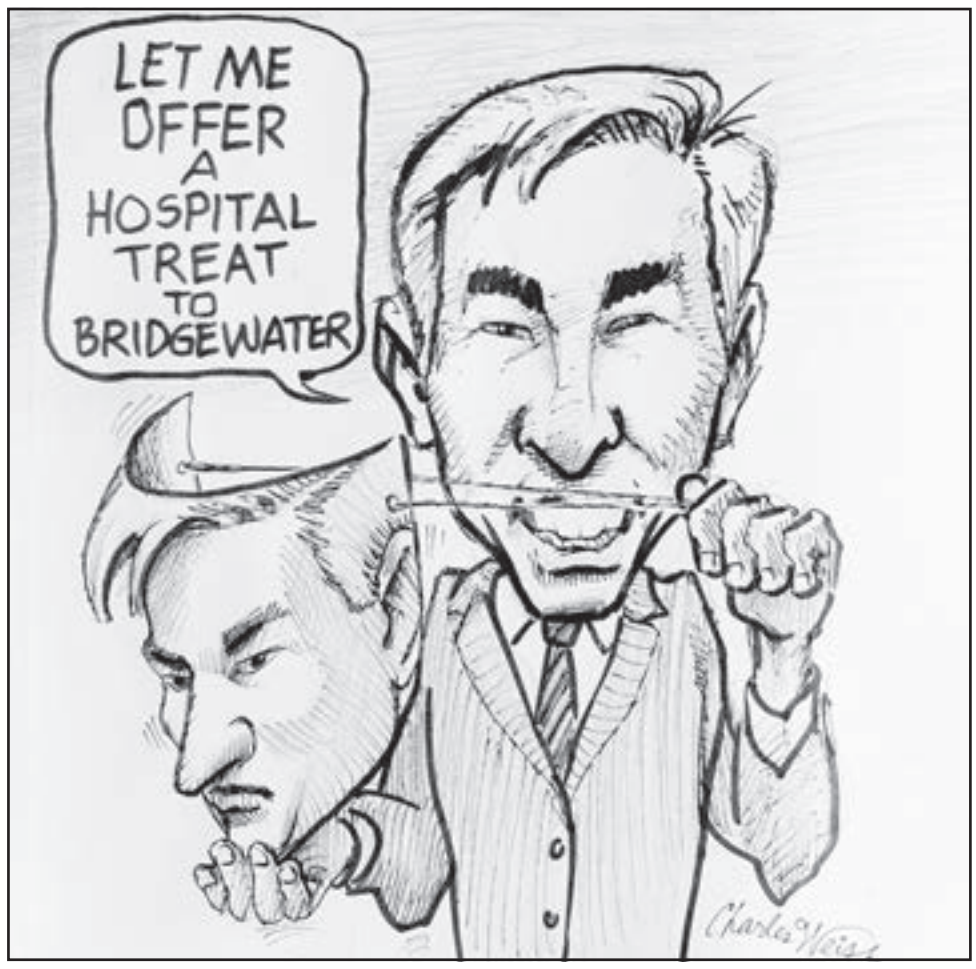

"We have a long way to go," she said.

Godsoe said that rural life poses particular problems. She noted the increased presence of domestic violence and the lack of resources. The institute considers itself a rural organization, although it has partnerships throughout Halifax and the rest of the province.

The organization is also very concerned about the impact of new technology and virtual spaces on the development of young people.

Bookchin remarked that social media algorithms, the manosphere, and online pornography have created new ways of normalizing violence against women, in a way that was not possible when the institute was first founded.

South Shore Chorale partners with new youth choir

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

SOUTH SHORE - This fall, the South Shore Chorale is joining forces with a new youth choir.

Founded by two music teachers, Ruth Lillington and Jasmine Jones, the independently run youth choir is now associated with the South Shore Chorale, which is providing support and bringing the young singers into its upcoming Christmas concerts.

On Sept. 17, the youth choir held its first rehearsal.

Peter Robson, an arranger with the South Shore Chorale, said the partnership developed over the summer through conversations between Lillington and Chorale director Amelia McMahon.

He said they are under the Chorale's umbrella, but not run by it, and that 'associated with' is probably the better term.

The relationship will give the youth choir space to perform as part of the Chorale's Christmas program. The young singers will perform two pieces on their own and two alongside the larger choir.

The groups will perform together Dec. 5 at St. John's Lutheran Church in Mahone Bay at 2:30 p.m., followed by a Dec. 6 performance at Bridgewater United Church.

Lillington, a Bridgewater music teacher and former member of the South Shore Chorale, previously established a youth choir based at the Waldorf School in Blockhouse while she was away from the Chorale. She later returned to the Chorale as assistant conductor before helping establish the LaHave River Youth Choir.

Robson said the youth ensemble will likely operate on a seasonal model, with rehearsals running through the school year and a break over the summer. The December concerts will be followed by another potential membership period from January through late May or June.

The format is intended to accommodate the varied schedules of young people, who may have sports, school and other commitments throughout the year.

Robson said performing in a choir can also help young people develop confidence and a sense of responsibility toward a group.

"There's the discipline of getting ready, of being at each rehearsal, of having the confidence to stand there and do something they've done a dozen times in a room by themselves."

For the South Shore Chorale, the partnership also addresses a longer-term concern: ensuring that choral singing continues to have a place in the region.

The Chorale was reconstituted in 1984 after an earlier iteration dating back to the late 1960s. It operated continuously for decades before the COVID-19 pandemic forced a roughly two-year shutdown. The group resumed in spring 2022.

International, local performers to take centre stage at Liverpool International Theatre Festival

By RICK CONRAD
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter
rickconradssb@gmail.com

LIVERPOOL – Every two years, the Liverpool International Theatre Festival gives people a unique chance to see some innovative and compelling theatre from around the world.

But this year, the 17th edition of the event will be a chance for audiences to see a lot of Queens County talent too.

Since 1992, the festival has welcomed amateur theatre troupes from more than 20 countries for a long weekend of performances at the Astor Theatre.

It's a cultural exchange as much as it's a theatrical event, with local residents opening their homes to troupe members and up to 50 volunteers pitching in to transport, feed and entertain them while they're here.

"So, we're really proud that it's sustained itself in all that time and all the volunteers that have made that happen," said Jean Robinson, chair of the festival.

This year, the event is being held over five days, from Oct. 14 to 18, with performances scheduled only in the evening. That allows the artists a little more down time than in previous festivals.

"We were getting some feedback from our troupe members that are coming here from literally all over the world that they would like a little more time to be able to see the area and experience Queens County," Robinson said.

One of the other highlights of the festival is the opening night Parade of Flags, as troupes gather at the tourist bureau downtown to walk together to the Astor, where they are all introduced with their national anthems.

This year, organizers have planned a special musical theatre showcase as part of the opening ceremonies called There's Something in the Water featuring five local performers – Brent Raddall, Deborah Raddall, Lauren Amirault, Kristopher Snarby and Alison Williams.

"As someone who came to Queens County by choice," Robinson says, "I had personally never been exposed to the extent of musical theatre in this community. And whenever I describe it to someone. I always say there has to be something in the water here because it's just so unique to this area."

Another new event this year will be two different conversations with theatre veterans. On Saturday at 2 p.m., Liverpool artist and playwright Libby Broadbent will talk about her upcoming play, The Marriage Monologues, the result of more than 100 conversations with people about their own relationships.

And on Sunday at 2 p.m., multiple LITF award-winner Eslam Awad of Egypt's East Voice Group for Arts will discuss the state of theatre in his home country.

Jean Robinson is the chair of the Liverpool International Theatre Festival, set for Oct. 14 to 18 at the Astor Theatre in Liverpool.

"He's going to talk about the process of theatre and the work that was done in Egypt and his role as the leader of that group and as a director, and an actor. So I think that'll be a really interesting conversation too."

As with any theatre festival, though, the play is the thing. Six one-act performances are planned by groups from Wales, Italy, England, Switzerland, Mexico and the Netherlands, in addition to a special film presentation from a Ugandan theatre troupe.

They run the gamut from family-friendly farce to folklore to physical theatre and drama.

Artistic directors Neil Maidman and Vic Mills of Contemporancient Theatre in Wales are back to helm their third festival. But Robinson says they're not the only ones returning. Many audience members keep making the trip every two years too.

"We certainly have people that come back every festival who don't live here, that will make the journey back to be part of the festival and experience," Robinson says.

"So it's so unique. I don't know of any other one in Canada that's like this. And we also try to make time to make sure folks get to see some of the highlights of Queens County while they're here and in hopes that they will come back and visit us again."

Sunday's closing ceremonies feature the LITF awards, designed this year by local stained glass artist Scot Slessor.

Robinson says they'll also honour longtime Nova Scotia theatre icon Eva Moore who died earlier this year. She helped kickstart the festival more than 35 years ago and was its first artistic director. The festival's best director award will be named in her memory.

"She's had a huge influence on us and on the festival."

Be the Peace marks 10 years of work to prevent gender-based violence

So the institute's work focuses on systemic change, not individual services. The institute's focus on systemic change involves collaboration with survivors, academics, the government, community groups, activists, and organizations serving African Nova Scotian, Indigenous, newcomer, and LGBTQ+ communities.

Bookchin and Godsoe both urged the demolition of the walls that separated the different systems: health, education, criminal justice, and mental health.

"We are trying to build bridges and bridge those silos so that we're actually all working together with the best information and the best capacity we can muster," Bookchin said.

Looking forward to the next ten years, she said that the institute needs significantly more capacity to expand its partnerships and create sustainable projects.

"I would like to see a province where the institutions react as a team, very quickly and collectively, when new cases of violence against women are reported. These cases would then be analyzed and measures taken to eradicate the systemic causes of violence rather than just treating the symptoms."

She added that ultimately meaningful progress could be made only when the public saw that women and girls were valued and not objectified, when perpetrators of violence were being counseled, and where victims had access to respectful and empathetic assistance.

"If we had enough money for a 15-person organization or a 20-person organization," Bookchin said, "I think we could do a lot more right."

Mobile Millinery Museum preserves history, one hat at a time

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

LUNENBURG - A collection of historic hats and accessories that the Mobile Millinery Museum has been recently acquired gives it a unique opportunity to show visitors what they wore, how they were made, and what they reveal about life in the past.

The collection is particularly valuable, because it contains many unfinished articles.

"We have finished ones which we can study; but the unfinished ones show us much more about the craftsmanship," said Norma Shephard.

The history of this collection is also long. Originally, these articles were made by two sisters from Truro, Nova Scotia, who set up a millinery shop in Chicago in the 1880s. Now, they are returning to their country of origin.

Shephard's collection is also a means of engaging local people in the task of conserving and explaining material culture.

The museum will hold a regular weekly Processing Day at the Lunenburg Library to help volunteers examine, study, handle and photograph the objects. Shephard said that the system of cataloguing, how to handle, photograph and record these objects, and the rules of conservation that are used to study historic objects will be explained to them.

"We're going to learn how to observe the pieces, what to look for, what to record, how to handle them and, once all of that is done, how to document everything," she said.

In the collection of this museum there are a few pieces of Edwardian dress made of stuffed birds, with preserved bird wings and taxidermied birds. The use of birds in dressmaking was quite common in the late 19th century and in the first half of the 20th, to such an extent that the slaughter of birds for the fashion industry caused great alarm and helped spur early wildlife conservation efforts.

The objects also pose a conservation problem: at that time, said Shephard, the common method for preserving the bird skins and other objects was the use of arsenic.

She must, therefore, handle the fragments carefully, in gloves and masks. All while she is looking for the right containers in which to preserve and show some of them.

The project is intended to challenge assumptions about how people lived and dressed in previous eras. Shephard cites historical examples of the way women in the country have adapted clothing to their circumstances. The stiff bones used in the upper part of bodices and corsets were made of expensive whalebones, but some women made supple substitutes using feather spines.

After some time, big companies began to manufacture and market featherbone clothes, though the idea originally came from the women's own adaptations.

"It's that type of myth-busting that I think is so interesting," Shephard said.

For her, it is of great value to preserve a broken feather fan; it gives one the opportunity of knowing how it was used rather than the way it looked when it was new.

This attention to detail extends to the stories of millinery, too. Shephard said historians are still debating whether Edwardian women used their long hat pins as a weapon. And she herself had heard from her own great-aunts raised during the Victorian era, that they did, and that they used them to defend themselves.

According to her view, these stories and memoirs are also a part of history, which can be preserved in museums as well as objects.

The Processing Days are offered to the local population free of charge. This is to encourage the public to participate in this venture and to use local cultural institutions.

"I want to see museums and libraries preserved and used," she said.

Shephard is in her 70s. She spent three decades working with the material culture of the people of Ontario. After retiring to Nova Scotia, she wanted to teach and work with historical objects.

Eventually, she hopes to mount exhibitions and more fashion shows. Shephard has already arranged fashion shows at a few churches and retirement homes, where people were interested in the style as well as in the people's stories.

She has already catalogued at least 3,000 of the hats in her collection, some of which are not in Nova Scotia, but back in Ontario where she had lived prior to her move to this province.

"Hopefully, a spinoff of this, once I have more of my collection here, will be possible," she said.

Chester Basin craft brewery buys Liverpool’s Hell Bay

By RICK CONRAD

Melanie Perron, co-owner of Hell Bay Brewing Company in Liverpool, has sold the business she and Mark Baillie began more than 15 years ago to Dan Tanner and Peggy Locke of Tanner and Co. Brewing in Chester Basin.

LIVERPOOL – The next time Melanie Perron opens the door to Hell Bay Brewing in Liverpool, it will be as a customer instead of an owner.

The co-owner of the almost 16-year-old craft brewery handed over the reins on Oct. 1 to Dan Tanner, co-owner of Tanner and Co. Brewing in Chester Basin.

“I’m ecstatic,” Perron says.

“I’m so happy that somebody was interested in the brewery who already has a background in brewing. Because that was my biggest fear was just somebody who just loves beer and had no experience in the industry, bought it, and then I would have to teach them absolutely everything. So, I’m happy Dan is already in the business. He loves the business. And you know, it couldn’t be a better fit, because we’ve known each other since we were in our early 20s.”

That was more than 20 years ago, when Perron, her former husband Mark Baillie and Tanner worked together at the Lunenburg Arms.

Perron and Baillie began Hell Bay in 2011 as Rusty Anchor Brewing in their barn in Cherry Hill, Lunenburg Co. But 15 years and a name and location change later, Perron decided she wanted to sell.

“It’s hard, but I’m ready for it,” she said. “I’m just happy because I’m not passionate for the business anymore or the industry anymore. It’s just nice to see it continue and go on with somebody who’s passionate for it.”

Perron says she loves what she and everybody else behind Hell Bay have built at their location in Liverpool.

“I think it’s good for the community too. Because this is such a hot spot. People love coming here. Friday nights are so busy, and we have such a great crowd, and it’s such a great community gathering centre. And it’s just nice to see that we’re not going to lose this.”

For Tanner, it’s a return to Queens County, where he worked for about 18 years, most of those as the food and beverage manager at White Point Beach Resort, before leaving in 2018 to concentrate on the brewery full time.

He says he was interested in buying Hell Bay as soon as he heard Perron was considering selling.

“They were one of the first breweries that came out,” he says.

“There was the first wave of Propeller and Garrison and such, but these folks were the ones that paved the way for the rest of us. So, you know, I’ve always had an admiration for what they’ve done, and obviously the beers they make. And it’s been years since I’ve been in Liverpool, and then I was happy to come back to Liverpool again. So, it was a no brainer. It was a natural fit.”

Tanner, who co-owns the business with his wife Peggy Locke, is bucking the craft brewery trend in Nova Scotia of the past couple of years. At a time when other small breweries are closing, downsizing or trying to sell, he and Locke are expanding.

There are just over 50 craft brewers in Nova Scotia, down from 67 in 2022.

He says they wanted to increase their production capacity from their small brewery in Chester Basin and their tap room in downtown Chester. They’ll still be based in Chester Basin, but they plan to add more tanks in Liverpool and keep it going as a tap room, with Hell Bay and Tanner brews on tap and in the fridge.

“We’re at our max capacity, especially July through September. We’re running at 100 per cent, and if we need to grow, there’s only one way to do it, because no more fermenters will fit in my garage.

“We are going to do a little bit more expansion behind the scenes and brew some of our stuff here, our Tanner stuff. This will at least double our capacity with the new tanks that are moving in. We’ll be closer to triple the capacity if everything goes as planned.”

Tanner and Co. brews eight core beers, in addition to 20 or more other small-batch, seasonal or special brews, including mead and cider. Hell Bay has five regular beers, including their original and award-winning English Ale, in addition to other small-batch varieties.

“It’s a great brand,” Tanner says of Hell Bay. “We’re going to do a little bit of updating to that, but the core is going to stay the same. It’s a part of the brewing history in Nova Scotia, so we thought it was also important to respect that with what we did. It is great the way it is, and we’re just going to continue its tradition.”

As for Perron, she says she’s looking forward to taking a break after helping Tanner and Locke with the transition. She’s planning a trip to Ontario to visit her parents.

“I have a million plans, but I’m not set on one yet, so the universe is going to guide me and let me know,” she says.

“So it’s going to be nice to see what they have going on and how they’re going to change things and improve it. And it’s also fun to help them meet all the customers and our regulars and get to know people that way. I don’t have to panic if there’s a big rush at the bar. I’m sure I’ll still get up and help, but it’s just going to be different. It’s going to be different paying for my beer.”

South Shore Chorale partners with new youth choir

Robson said changing demographics and the decline of church choirs have reduced the number of places where people can regularly sing together.

“We are not getting younger,” he said. “Our membership, if we don’t keep adding to it, will within 10 years die away.”

The Chorale has also attempted to make membership more accessible to younger singers. Adult members pay $150 for a session of roughly a dozen rehearsals and two concerts, while members aged 25 to 34 pay $75. Those under 24 can participate without a membership fee.

The group does not audition prospective members, Robson said, allowing anyone interested in singing to attend a rehearsal and determine whether the experience suits them.

The Chorale also performs outside its regular concerts, including visits to long-term care homes. Robson said the group has visited three facilities over the past year, performing free concerts for residents before its regular weekend performances.

The youth partnership, he added, is another way of encouraging people to discover the experience of singing together.

“Having a youth choir with us, singing with us and rehearsing with us, means those young people are going to be less hesitant about saying, ‘I’m not going to go sing with my grandmother,’” Robson said. “Instead, they’ll say, ‘We did that, and that was fun.’”

For Robson, who has been singing in groups for about 70 years, the goal is ultimately straightforward.

“We hope to expand singing,” he said.

Collection finds its way into the world after poet's death

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

SOUTH SHORE - Poet Cynthia French spent years writing and publishing poetry, including a collection of autobiographical poems that would eventually become Barachois.

Now, three years after her passing, her poetry is being published posthumously. Readers can learn about this Newfoundland-born poet through the memories, places, and experiences captured in the collection.

French's husband, Les French, said she wasn't alone as a writer. She was one of five poets who regularly met at the former Biscuit Eater in Mahone Bay to share their poems, critique each other's work and discuss poetry.

The group, which came to be known as the Biscuit Eaters, evolved from a writing workshop led by Carol Langille.

"I think that experience would have ruled out the island life for me," Les said.

French had been seriously writing poetry for years. He described the book as "a little bit of an autobiography in lyric form" that draws on her childhood and early life in Newfoundland, as well as more recent experiences.

Among her experiences were three two-week writing courses that she took in Chile. She explains this in a section of the book.

French had written an early version of Barachois around 2015. But it was still unfinished and unpublished when she died in 2023.

After her death, Les, Jan Barkhouse, and Jan Hull worked on finishing the book. They collected more poems that they knew existed and began to put together a manuscript.

The decision to publish came in part from the success of French's poetry.

"There was so much positive feedback and reaction to her work," Les said. "A few people actually said that it was work that needed to be in the world."

He thinks French was reluctant to get published because of the responsibilities that come with it. The process of publishing a book usually includes readings, interviews, and promoting one's own work, something French was uncomfortable with.

"Cynthia wasn't one for blowing her own horn," Les said.

Les, then, took the job that she may have avoided: promoting her collection.

One of the strongest endorsements came from poet Don McKay. Les approached McKay after a celebration of life for Cynthia in St. John's. Les handed him a copy of the manuscript and asked him to read it if he had time.

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO
Poet Cynthia French collection of poems was released this past summer.

McKay, a two-time winner of the Governor General's Literary Award, holder of the Griffin Poetry Prize, and Order of Canada recipient, responded with two pages of handwritten comments about the book.

His exuberance changed Les's thoughts about the book. It was a book that would be self-published, and suddenly, it seemed like a collection of stories worth a wide audience.

The manuscript was also passed around award-winning poets in several provinces, and the ensuing praise reinforced the notion that French's writing was worthy of being read by more than just her circle of friends and family.

Barachois ultimately does more than introduce the reader to the poet Cynthia French. The book offers a portrait of the person behind the poems. The reader learns about the Newfoundland girl, her journeys, her time as a writer, and the experiences that shaped her.

French was not alive to see the collection published, but those who knew her best have worked to ensure that her unfinished work would not remain unpublished and unseen.

Through Barachois, readers who never knew Cynthia can now experience her voice for themselves.

Local cadet earns top cadet honour

BRIDGEWATER – Mira-Kole Tanner, a Chief Warrant Officer with the 2688 Kinsmen Army Cadets, recently earned the province's top cadet award in her final year, presented to her Sept. 27 by Lieutenant-Colonel (retired) Ian MacVicar.

Tanner, has been a member of the cadets since she was 12 and has earned many awards throughout her tenure, but this tops them all and she said that it was unexpected.

"It was amazing. It was a complete surprise. I wasn't expecting it whatsoever," she said.

Tanner said that she wasn't sure why she won the award, but guessed that the amount of volunteering may have given her a leg up.

She has volunteered for many years at the hospital, coaching U13 volleyball and helping out at the Legion during meals or other activities.

Why join army cadets? "I found it was a great opportunity to meet new people and try new experiences."

She adds that she attended summer camp each year and oftentimes she was one of the higher ranks in her corps. and because of that she was given harder and/or larger roles at camp.

Through her summertime experiences, were a couple of adventures that she had undertaken over the years that were memorable, such as a week-long hiking trip that she went on two years ago.

Are you connected with someone buried at Hillside Cemetery?

Hillside Cemetery is the final resting place of several members of the community, estimated to be more than 230, who died while living at the Lunenburg Municipal Hospital (County Home), which was located on the site of the current Municipal Activity Recreation Complex (MARC) at 33 Leary Fraser Road, Dayspring, NS.

The Municipality of the District of Lunenburg wants to know if any family members or relatives of those buried at Hillside Cemetery are interested in a way to honour their loved one by name. Your interest will help us decide whether to move ahead with this potential memorial project.

PUBLIC INFORMATION MEETING

Proposal to change the zoning from Core Commercial to Residential Two at PID# 60091683, Duke St. between Pleasant St. and Union St., by way of Amendments to the Village of Chester Land Use By-law

What: Public Information Meeting to provide information and solicit comments on proposed amendments to the Chester Village Land Use By-law.

When: Wednesday October 21, 2026, beginning at 6:00 pm

Where: Council Chambers, 151 King Street, Chester

What is it: A landowner has requested amendment to the Land Use By-law to change the zoning of their lands from Commercial Core to Residential Two. This would facilitate the development of the vacant lands for residential purposes, potentially with a subdivision into 2 lots, with single unit dwellings being the permitted use in the Residential Two zone.

How can I have my say?

The meeting is designed to provide information on the proposed amendments and allow for comments, questions, and ideas to be shared. You may also contact Planning staff directly to ask questions or let us know your thoughts on the proposal.

After the Public Information Meeting Staff will prepare a report and draft amendments to be considered by the Planning Advisory Committee to obtain a recommendation to Council. The report and recommendation will then be considered by Council before making a final decision following a Public Hearing.

Notices with the date, time and location of future meetings will be posted in a local newspaper, on our website, on Municipal Social Media and at the Municipal Office. Council Meetings are open to members of the public and are also streamed live on YouTube (https://www.youtube.com/user/modcvideo).

A little Halloween magic for a great cause

ASHLEY KIPPERS
SHAID Tree Animal Shelter General Manager

Halloween is just around the corner and this year SHAID Animal Shelter is inviting local businesses, organizations, clubs, churches, sports teams and community groups to help us make it extra special for local families!

On Sunday, Oct. 25, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the LCLC, SHAID will be hosting our very first Trunk or Treat – a fun, family-friendly Halloween event where children can enjoy trick-or-treating in one festive location while connecting with the local businesses and groups that make our communities so special.

We are currently looking for more local businesses and groups to rent a table for just $20 and join the fun. Participants are encouraged to decorate their table, hand out treats, and let their creativity run wild. You don't need to be a professional event planner or Halloween decorator —just bring your enthusiasm, some treats, and your best Halloween spirit!

For businesses, this is a wonderful opportunity to put your name and organization directly in front of local families in a fun and positive setting. Rather than simply placing an advertisement somewhere, you'll have the chance to meet people, interact with children and parents, showcase your business, and create a memorable experience. Community events like these give local organizations an opportunity to build relationships and become a familiar face in the community.

And, of course, there's the feel-good factor: your participation helps support SHAID Animal Shelter and the animals in our care. Your $20 table rental helps make this event possible while bringing businesses, community groups, families, and animal lovers together.

For families, children can participate in the Trunk or Treat for just $5 per child. Costumes are encouraged, and we hope to fill the LCLC with plenty of little witches, superheroes, princesses, monsters, pumpkins — and perhaps a few future veterinarians!

We would love to see this become an annual community tradition, but we need our community to help us make that happen. If your business, club, church, team, or organization would like to participate, reserve your table by emailing info@shaidanimalshelter.com. Spaces are limited, so don't wait too long to claim yours.

And while we're talking about making connections, we'd also like to introduce you to someone at SHAID who is still waiting for her own happy ending.

MEET CROISSANT

Croissant is a sweet one-year-old girl who has already spent time taking care of everyone else. Now, it's her turn to be spoiled!

Croissant was a wonderful mother to her kittens, who have now grown up and moved on to their forever homes. This gentle girl may be timid when you first meet her, but underneath that shyness is a loving companion waiting to feel safe enough to let her personality shine.

She'll need a little patience and time as she adjusts to a new home. Once she settles in, Croissant is ready for the good life: cozy naps, gentle affection, comfortable surroundings, and plenty of love.

After raising her kittens, we think Croissant has earned a well-deserved retirement from motherhood — and she's accepting applications for the position of professional spoiled house cat.

If you have room in your home for a sweet girl who simply needs someone to give her time to blossom, Croissant may be the perfect addition to your family.

Whether you support SHAID by adopting, volunteering, donating, participating in fundraising events, or joining us for Trunk or Treat, every bit of community support helps us continue giving animals like Croissant the care and second chances they deserve.

Come out Oct. 25, bring the kids, meet some wonderful local businesses, enjoy some Halloween fun – and help SHAID make a little magic happen for animals in need.

Falkland Ridge

by Mrs. Robert MacKay

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mallman, of Hingham, Mass., arrived on Thursday night to spend a few days with the latter's mother, Mrs. H. Y. Sproule.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Blackadar, daughter Miss Inez, and Mrs. Lois Hirtle, New Carada, visited Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacKay, Sunday evening. Mrs. Hirtle remained at the MacKay home for a visit.

Mr. Edward Marshall and daughter Debbie, Halifax, are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Banford Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Slauenwhite and Margaret spent Thursday at Halifax.

On Friday evening about 75 neighbors and friends gathered at the Carey home to welcome them to our community.

Lic. Donald Chase, our pastor, welcomed the Carey family and Mr. and Mrs. Turner to our community and presented them with a purse of money for which they very fittingly expressed their thanks.

A lunch was served by the ladies after which Mr. Carey, son Robert and Mr. Chester Weaver entertained the guests with violin and guitar music.

To choose a feeling

SUSANNE BECK
Reality Check

The Choice Theory suggestion that we have some choice over our emotions can sound unrealistic. Emotions can pop up so fast; we can be struck by anger, overcome by a wave by grief, or even surprised by joy. It can all seem beyond our control.

If you've ever tried to force yourself to "cheer up" when you are unhappy, you already know that changing an emotion is hard to do.

Granted, Dr. Glasser doesn't say that exercising emotional choice is easy. He just suggests that it's possible. And rather than trying to change a feeling directly, work instead on what we're doing and thinking. Feelings will follow along.

For example, let's say you are feeling unhappy and you don't want that. You want a change. First, take a good look at what you are doing right now. Ask yourself, is what I'm doing helping me? Or is it leading me into more unhappiness? If it's helping, continue. But if it's driving you deeper into unhappiness, change it.

Changing what we are physically doing is generally not too difficult, is it? If I'm scrolling social media or watching TV and detect that I am getting increasingly unhappy, I can change what I'm doing.

I can turn off whatever device I'm using. I can get out of my chair and take the dog for a walk. I could reach out to someone, whether simply for a conversation or to extend an offer to do something useful or fun, preferably both. I can do something productive, whether it's creating, catching up on correspondence, or in the worst case, I suppose I could do some cleaning.

You get the picture. While there can be times where we are stuck and unable to change what we are doing, realistically those times are rare. Engaging in some kind of physical activity is often an effective way to move us out of whatever emotion we want to relieve ourselves of.

Even if we can't change what we are doing, we still have agency over our thoughts. We can change what we are thinking. This may be especially useful when we want to get control over emotions that have us brooding, whether we are ruminating over past events or fussing over potential future events, especially those we can't do anything about.

How would we change what we are thinking? If you are so inclined, you can lose yourself in passive activities such as games, movies and novels. Those activities can distract us quite effectively while we are engaged.

Distraction can be helpful, but activities that require active thinking are even better. Even if you don't consider yourself a "creative person," try creative activities. Writing is one. While you may not wish to try writing the next great novel (but maybe you do), writing even simple things can be useful for you and for others.

Think and write about problems you have solved, obstacles you have overcome, or how to do various tasks. It may be a surprise to realize that not everyone knows the things you know! Write them down.

If words aren't your joy, then grab a sketchpad. Sit outside; draw what you see. Try cartooning. That could be fun! No need to show anyone; this can be your own private joy.

You may find that none of this is easy. My encouragement for you is that it's worth making the effort to feel better. Even if you don't gain the control that you would like to have, making the effort, going through a process to gain control, can demonstrate that you do perhaps have more control than you realized. It's worth the try.

Do you have feelings that control you? Have you made efforts to gain control? How well did that work for you? Let me know at choice@focusonclarity.com or by mail c/o South Shore Bulletin.

To your choices! ~ Susanne ~

The clay-coloured sparrow

JAMES HIRTLE
Bird Notes

Gerry Tyhuis and I decided to do some birding in Queens County on Oct. 3.

We ended the day with 31 species of birds. We birded at Beach Meadows, some parts of Liverpool and out to Shore Road, The Leaf & Yard Waste Site, Sand Beach and to Western Head.

At Beach Meadows we saw 22 species. There we had 14 yellow-rumped warblers, a northern parula, two palm warblers, a brown creeper, and a pileated woodpecker as better birds. A sharp-shinned hawk and a bald eagle were nice to see.

We did not spend much time in Liverpool birding but picked up two greater yellowlegs there. A highlight of the Leaf & Yard Waste Site was a clay-coloured sparrow. This was my second one for the year as I had seen one at Gulliver's Cove on Sept. 18.

The clay-coloured sparrow nests from British Columbia, to Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Michigan, south to Atlanta, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, to Texas and to New York. They winter from California, in Texas, south into Mexico.

The clay-coloured sparrow is 12.5 to 13.75 cm long with sexes outwardly alike. They are paler than the chipping sparrow. They have a striped back of smoky gray, a pale clear breast and a white stripe over each eye. They have brown ear patches, sharply outlined with pale gray. There is a buff stripe in the middle of the crown and a pale white malar stripe on each side of the throat. There are two white wing bars.

In feeding, the clay-coloured sparrow mostly forages on the ground or in low shrubbery. They eat many kinds of seeds of grasses, weeds, garden flowers and sweet alyssum, cockscomb, tumbleweed, Bermuda grass, crabgrass, mustard, mesquite, etc. They will eat finely cracked corn, millet, sunflower seeds, and bread. In the summer they eat grasshoppers and other insects.

I had spoken with Glenn Rhodenizer of Second Peninsula and he reported that a northern yellow warbler had been coming into the cattle barn and was seen to be picking flies and insects off the cows. Glenn also reported a pair of greater yellowlegs feeding in back of the barn.

Gerry Tyhuis told me about a great-horned owl that landed on his house roof in Feltzen South. Miguel Morales sighted three dunlin on Crescent Beach (Lunenburg County) on Sept. 30. Seeing an osprey is rare in Oct. I sighted one on Oct. 3 at Cherry Hill.

Ethan Sarty found a white-crowned sparrow at Kejimkujik Seaside Adjunct. Logan Moore had two dickcissels there. He also reported lots of blackpoll warblers and pine siskins.

On Oct. 4 Krista Hilchey had American pipits, sanderlings, a dunlin, black-bellied plovers, greater yellowlegs and a short-billed dowitcher at Crescent Beach (Lunenburg County). On Oct. 7 Patrica and David Watson had a Canada jay and a hermit thrush in East LaHave. I had black-bellied plovers, greater yellowlegs and a short-billed dowitcher at Oxner's Beach. Logan Moore reported lots of pine siskins arriving at Cape Sable Island. Ronnie d'Entremont saw an indigo bunting and a rose-breasted grosbeak in Shelburne.

The last shift decides May

STEPHANIE MILLER VINCENT
Business Moments

Your rehire rate isn't decided in April. It's decided this month.

There's a particular quiet that settles over the South Shore in October. We start to stack the patio chairs. The "See you next season!" sign goes up in the window and somewhere tonight, a seasonal employee hangs up an apron for the last time, folds a final paycheque into a back pocket, and walks out the back door.

What happens in those last few minutes matters far more than most owners realize.

I've closed out a lot of seasons over 30-plus years in this industry, and here's what I've learned: people don't remember the whole summer. They remember the best moments, the hardest moments, and how it ended.

Picture two goodbyes.

In the first, it's the last shift. The manager is on the phone, waves, mouths "thanks, have a good winter." The cheque is in an envelope on the end of the bar. Done.

In the second, the owner stops what they're doing, looks that person in the eye, and says, "The Johnsons asked for you by name three times this summer. That's not luck. That's you." Then: "We'd love to have you back. Can I count on you in May?"

Same 90 seconds. A completely different winter.

Because here's what happens next. That employee goes home. Over the next seven months, at the kitchen table, in the rink stands, in the coffee line, someone is going to ask, "So how was your summer job?" Whatever they say is your recruiting ad. Your rehire rate is decided in October, not April. By the time you're putting the "Now Hiring" sign back in the window, the story about you has already been told. A dozen times.

And in a community our size, it travels. To the younger sister looking for her first job. To the buddy who happens to be a great line cook. To the mom who sits on a committee with half your customers. Let's be honest: on the South Shore, every exit interview eventually happens in the grocery store aisle.

So, before you lock up for the season, three things.

Say something specific. "Great job this summer" is polite. It's also forgettable. Name the moment: the night they covered a double, the regular who lit up when they walked over, the mess they handled before you even knew about it. Specific praise is the thing people repeat. Generic thanks evaporates before they reach the parking lot.

Ask the question out loud. Most owners assume their best people know they're wanted back. They don't. Young staff often read silence as "you were just summer help." Ask directly. Pencil them in. Let them leave knowing there's a spot with their name on it.

Keep the door open on purpose. A text in December. A card at Christmas. An invite to a staff get-together in March before the season ramps up. Seven months of silence says the relationship ended with the paycheque. A two-minute check-in says it didn't.

And for the folks you won't be bringing back? Give them a good goodbye too. They'll be talking about you all winter as well, and you get to decide what's worth saying.

Come spring, half the owners will be scrambling: signs in every window, social posts begging for applications, interviewing anyone with a pulse and a free Saturday. The ones who aren't scrambling? They did the work this month, one honest goodbye at a time.

So as your team walks out that back door for the last time this season, ask yourself the question I've been asking leaders for years:

What do they say when you walk away?

That question is also the title of my new book, What They Say When You Walk Away: The Hospitality Leadership Playbook for Turning Culture into Guest Loyalty and Growth, out October 18. Until launch day, I'm offering Founding Reader copies, signed and shipped by me personally. When the book goes live on the 18th, the Founding Reader list closes. Sign up at smillervision.com

MEMORIAMS

JOUDREY: In loving memory of Herschel M. Joudrey, who left us on October 9, 2014
A leaf in the book of memory is quietly turned today.
How sadly I have missed you since you were called away.
Memories grow sweeter as time passes on,
When you long for a face and a voice that is gone.
I think of your sayin's, and treasure your smile,
And feel you're not lost, just gone for a while.
Today, tomorrow, my whole life through,
I will treasure the memories I have of you.
Love from wife, Vivian;
children, Neil, Carla,
Gina, Krista, and families.

MEMORIAMS

Wally Brown - October 16, 2021
When the nights are cold
And the stars are few,
I close my eyes and think of you.
A silent hope,
A silent tear,
A silent wish that you were here.
Karen, Darin, Lana & Families.

DANIELS: in loving memory of my parents; Father, Clifford, who passed away on August 2nd, 1992; Mother, Elsie, who passed away on October 16th, 2010.
We feel so sad when those we love,
Are called to live in their home above.
But why should we grieve when they say goodbye?
And go to dwell in a cloudless sky.
For they have but gone to prepare the way,
And we'll meet them again some happy day.
For God has told us that nothing can sever,
A life he created to live forever.
So let God's promise soften our sorrow;
And give new strength for a better tomorrow.
Remembered and sadly missed every day,
I love you both so very much. You were good parents. XXOO

OBITUARIES

Merle Vincent Zinck

It is with heavy hearts we announce the passing of Merle Vincent Zinck, 81, of Lower Northfield, born October 11, 1944.

For 39 years and 9 months, Merle worked in the parts department at LaHave Equipment Ltd. He was a member of the Maritime Ox Pulling Association and the New Germany Lions Club. He was also a member of the Mic Mac Rod and Gun Club and served as caretaker of Maple Grove Cemetery. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

Merle enjoyed playing horseshoes, gardening, and spending time in the woods. His family will remember his famous "Zinck Beans" and the wood he loved cutting for them. He whistled while he worked and drove the tractor, and he cherished hunting trips with the guys from PEI – whether they got one or not.

He was a devoted presence in his grandchildren's lives, always making time to watch their sports or take them to their events. He made sure they knew he was there for them. Though a quiet man, his love was always felt. He enjoyed laughing and playing cards with friends and family, and perhaps having a drink or two.

Merle was predeceased by his parents, Fred and Ellen Zinck of Lower Northfield; his brothers Charles of Chicago, and St. Clair of Lower Northfield; brothers-in-law Raymond Rafuse and Paul Demone; sister-in-law Rita Sutton; and grandson Tristan Zinck.

He is survived by his loving wife, Elaine; daughters Angela (Darrell Fraser), Kelli (John DeAdder), and Kim (Ian Bigelow); son Christopher (Tracey Jarvis); grandchildren Nicholas, Dylan, Benjamin, Zachery, and Jaelynn; and great-granddaughter Charlotte. He is also survived by his sisters Joyce (Ozzie) Wile and Diane Demone; sisters-in-law Monica Zinck and Linda Rafuse; and brother-in-law Jack (Marena) Rafuse.

In Merle's honour, family and friends will gather for light refreshments on October 9, 2026, from 1-4pm at the West Northfield Community Hall, 227 Feener Corner Road.

Donations can be made in his honour to Maple Grove Cemetery, or to St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, West Northfield.

Arrangements entrusted to Sweeny's Funeral Home, Bridgewater, where online condolences may be left at www.sweenysfuneralhome.com

Birds posted to the rare bird list over the past week were the white ibis in Glace Bay, a black-bellied whistling duck in Truro, a golden-winged warbler in Ketch Harbour, a blue-winged warbler in Truro and a curlew sandpiper at Pond Cove, Brier Island.

Halifax County rare birds were white-eyed vireo, summer tanager, yellow-billed cuckoo, white-crowned sparrows, clay-coloured sparrow, orange-crowned warbler, Tennessee warbler and dickcissel.

The Northeast mainland had a pine warbler. The Northwest Mainland greater white-fronted goose, snow goose and blackpoll warblers. Southwest Nova Scotia which includes Shelburne, Yarmouth and Digby County had red-headed woodpecker, Lapland longspurs, Western palm warbler, two Baltimore orioles and Lincoln's sparrow.

On Oct. 4 Logan LaLonde on Brier Island reported thousands of birds and he had 70 species including black-billed cuckoo, yellow-billed cuckoo, six rusty blackbirds, one house finch and one pine warbler. The valley produced a snow goose, a pomarine jaeger and a red-shouldered hawk. Across the province it appears that there was a large influx of pine siskins over the past week.

"It was a good experience. I had to camp outside for a week and got to meet a bunch of great people," she said.

Above all, what she is most proud of is becoming chief of her corps.

"I worked real hard for it and I put a lot of my time and dedication into the corps, so I'm glad my officers noticed and made me the highest-ranking officer," she said.

Looking back on things, Tanner said that she learned a lot of leadership skills by going to cadets and when asked how she was applying the skills she learned from cadets into her normal everyday life.

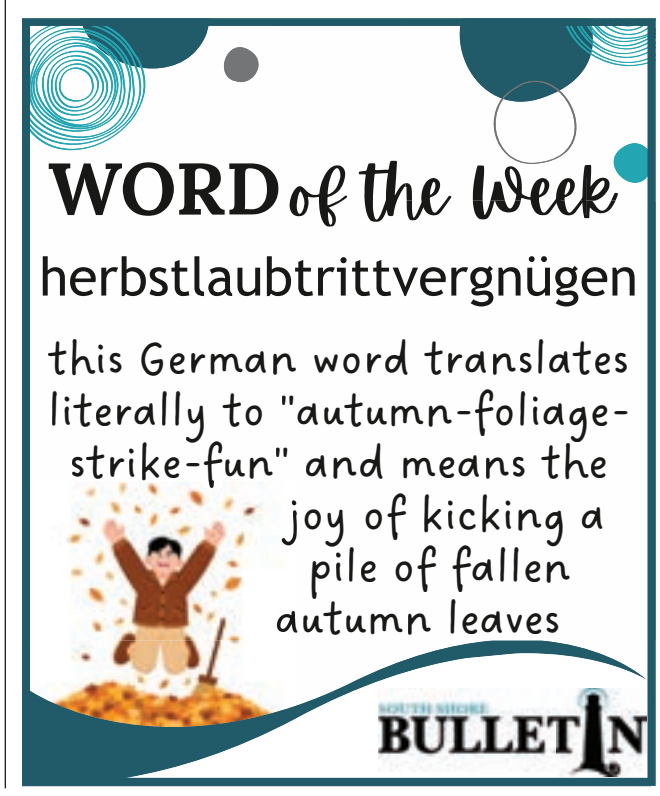

Tanner graduated from high school in 2026 and is now attending St. FX in the Bachelor of Science in Aquatic Resources four-year program.

"It made me more confident and outgoing. So, in a large group working on school projects or activities, I find I can put some of my knowledge and leadership skills to the project and I am more confident in what I say and how I do things," she said.

Along with school and cadets, she also played volleyball, skated and plays piano and clarinet.

Along with the top cadet award, she has won many awards in the past such as: Outstanding Contribution Award; Training officers Award of Excellence; Top shot; Esprit de Corps; Best Dressed Senior Cadet; Lord Strathcona medal and Medal of Excellence.

Tanner adds that she would love to stay involved in the cadet program in some capacity.
