Hotels owners want to press pause on new tax

By RICK CONRAD
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter
rickconradssb@gmail.com

LIVERPOOL – Region of Queens councillors have rejected an "eleventh-hour" request by some hotel owners to delay the implementation of a new accommodations levy.

In a Sept. 21 letter sent to Mayor Scott Christian and his fellow councillors, a group of operators listed their concerns about the new bylaw, which is scheduled to come into effect on Oct. 1. Councillors discussed it at their Sept. 22 meeting.

"We are opposed to this bylaw as it stands and to the process that produced it," reads the letter, signed by Robert Risley, owner of White Point Beach Resort; Terry Whynot, owner of the Quarterdeck Resort in Summerville; Jaison Sandhu, owner of Best Western Plus Hotel and Conference Centre in Liverpool; and Greg Whynot, owner of Bull Point Estate in Port Mouton.

They say they weren't consulted properly before the bylaw was drafted and introduced, pointing to only one meeting on April 13 with municipal staff. They say none of the concerns raised at the meeting were addressed in the bylaw.

No representative from the four facilities appeared at a council meeting where the bylaw was discussed.

"We would rather be your partners in building the visitor economy of Queens County than your opponents on a bylaw," the letter says.

"Every one of us has capital, payroll and reputation committed to this community, and every one of us has a direct commercial interest in more visitors coming to Queens and staying longer. Give us a governance structure with real authority, a plan supported by evidence, an equitable contribution model and honest measurement, and you will find this group at the table and contributing."

A three per cent tax will be charged on the purchase price of all fixed-roof accommodation room nights, including hotels, motels, Airbnbs and other short-term rentals in Queens County. The Nova Scotia government has mandated that the revenue generated from the levy can be spent only on developing tourism in the area.

The municipality has estimated that the tax could generate up to $250,000 a year from the 159 short-term rentals registered in Queens County.

Some councillors have suggested using that money for a concert or other event at the municipally owned Queens Place Emera Centre.

"This is the core of our objection," the letter reads.

"Subsidizing municipal event programming at Queens Place Emera Centre is not the same thing as incremental destination marketing, and the public rationale offered for it — that it delivers events for residents at no cost to them — is a description of a tax shift, not a tourism investment."

Councillors and staff have discussed the accommodations levy bylaw at numerous meetings since 2025. The region sought public input from property owners in April 2025.

The bylaw passed its second and final reading on July 14.

In their letter, the four operators say they want the bylaw to be delayed until April 1, 2027, to exempt bookings that have been made, but not paid for by Oct. 1.

They also want council to:

- establish an accommodation levy advisory committee, which council is already planning. But the owners want a majority of voting seats to be held by levy-paying fixed-roof operators, with the power to recommend an annual spending plan to council
- publish a spending plan and multi-year marketing plan before collecting any fees
- commit to annual public reporting and independent evaluation with details of revenue and how the money is spent "measured against a pre-levy baseline established before collection starts"
- add exemptions for non-tourism stays, for contracted work crews or medical and compassionate travel or "emergency displacement". The bylaw already has exceptions for medical reasons and for emergencies.
- exempt all bookings confirmed in writing before the bylaw's publication date, regardless of payment date
- include a mandatory three-year review and sunset clause, so that the levy lapses if it can't "demonstrate incremental return"
- disclose the terms of the agreement with the Ontario Restaurant Hotel and Motel Association, which already administers a similar levy for Ontario municipalities.

Glyphosate spraying in Lunenburg, Queens, other counties raises concerns

By RICK CONRAD
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter
rickconradssb@gmail.com

The Nova Scotia government needs to give residents more information about where companies are spraying potentially toxic pesticides and herbicides, critics say.

4616513 Nova Scotia Ltd., registered to Marcus and Katherine Zwicker in Bridgewater, was approved in August for an aerial spraying program for vegetation management on 1,032 hectares of private woodlots in Lunenburg, Queens, Shelburne, Digby, Kings and Annapolis counties. It was supposed to occur between Sept. 8 and Sept. 30.

Marcus Zwicker could not be reached for comment.

Provincial regulations require 30 days' notice to be given to property owners within 500 metres of a spray zone, signage posted at the sites, and newspaper advertisements detailing the program.

A notice posted in the South Shore Bulletin said the spraying of the Health Canada-approved glyphosate-based VisionMAX is meant "to promote the survival and growth of young or naturally occurring conifer seedlings."

It said it's being done at the request of private woodlot owners.

A letter posted to social media from the company to an owner of a neighbouring property of one of the spray sites states that the company is using "the least toxic and narrowest-spectrum herbicide" and will be applied in a way that will "improve precision and minimize drift".

The Lahey Review of Forest Practices from 2018 recommended the continued use of herbicides on private land.

The notice in the Bulletin told people to go to the Nova Scotia government's pesticide approvals webpage for complete site information. But at the time, the latest approvals listed on that site were from 2024.

After the Bulletin contacted Environment and Climate Change about it, only basic information was added with the name of the company and the date of the approval. No other information is available. And a spokesman said no further details would be released and the department wouldn't be commenting any further.

Products like VisionMAX suppress the growth of many deciduous or hardwood species like aspen and alders, and allow the faster-growing evergreens to flourish.

According to a study published in June by Dalhousie University researchers in the School for Resource and Environmental Studies, glyphosate-based sprays can disrupt plant growth up to two years after the original application. It can be stored in plant tissues and roots for a minimum of a year and be transferred to new growth.

They also raised concerns about its effect on wildlife and aquatic life. In humans, direct exposure to glyphosate has been linked to various cancers, though that appears to be more of a risk for the people mixing and applying the spray.

"When considering potential impacts on human health, the cumulative effects of chronic exposure to low quantities of glyphosate should be considered for both humans and wildlife," the study says.

The researchers recommend an immediate ban on glyphosate, with a move to herbicide-free alternatives such as mechanical methods of mowing, brush clearing and soil cultivation. They concede that those are more labour-intensive but point to provinces like Quebec, where glyphosate has been banned since 2001, and which relies on alternative methods.

They also called for an end to aerial spraying and more transparency in how the province approves permits.

Liberal MLA Becky Druhan, who represents Lunenburg West, said she's heard from many concerned residents about the lack of information available. She said she's spoken to Environment and Climate Change Minister Tim Halman about it, but "we haven't seen any improvement in communication from the department, and in fact, they are sharing less and less as the years go by."

"Nova Scotians spend time in our forests for all kinds of reasons from work to play and everything in between, and they should have enough information to make informed decisions about being in an area where spraying is planned," she said in an interview.

"I'm also concerned because forestry is an incredibly important economic driver, particularly in rural Nova Scotia, and government has an obligation to regulate it in a way that supports public confidence. So when government makes information harder to find, it undermines trust in the industry, and that's not fair to Nova Scotians or to the forestry sector."

Lisa Lachance, NDP environment critic, says they've heard from concerned residents from Cape Breton, Kings, Annapolis, Lunenburg and Queens counties.

"It's really important that government build trust and, in a sense, this government is not building trust with communities. ... This limited process exists, and it seems like the very least that government should be doing is making sure that that process is being followed and that they should be really clear and transparent with communities about what's happening."

According to a Global News story, a group of residents in Bear River has filed a formal complaint with the department about the lack of notice and information.

And the Assembly of Nova Scotia Mi'kmaw Chiefs said in a news release that they're "strongly opposed to the use of glyphosate and other herbicides in Mi'kma'ki."

"This spraying threatens our ability to safely access and harvest the foods, medicines, and other resources that sustain us," said Chief Carol Potter, chief of the Bear River First Nation and co-lead of environment, energy and mines for the Assembly.

"These resources are part of who we are, our way of life, and how we connect with the land. This is about protecting our health as well as our lands."

The mayors of the Region of Queens and the Municipality of the District of Lunenburg have also said they're troubled by the process and lack of transparency from the provincial government.

"I do have concerns about a lack of transparency surrounding it," said Queens Mayor Scott Christian.

"I think it is important for Nova Scotians to understand exactly what the practices are and what's going on there."

MODL Mayor Elspeth Mclean-Wile wrote to Halman about the municipality's "deep concerns" and asked the department to provide more information and allow the community to give more input.

Mayor says shelter running smoothly as town responds to community concerns

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

BRIDGEWATER - Mayor David Mitchell, says the new 24-hour shelter is running well, but he does acknowledge that in the neighbourhood around it there is concern about disruptive behaviour and loitering.

The shelter, a project of the South Shore Open Door Association (SSODA), represents a new effort to provide shelter at night and around the clock in Bridgewater. Mitchell said that the town is still adjusting to having a 24-hour shelter, but that, on the whole, has been successful.

The biggest change we've seen in terms of community engagement, according to Mitchell, has been the involvement of SSODA in the broader community.

He said the operator had quickly addressed problems in the shelter itself. The town appreciates SSODA's willingness to work with residents and other community partners.

But the town has also received reports of the activity of those outside the shelter.

He cited disruptive behaviour, loitering on private property and issues involving the community garden.

Mitchell said that these problems were not like those of Bridgewater's former drop-in centre.

Shelburne's giant pumpkin festival and regatta returns

By KEVIN MCBAIN
kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

SHELBURNE – Have you ever seen anyone paddle a pumpkin before?

If the answer is no, you must attend the fifth annual Nova Scotia Pumpkin Festival and Regatta set for Oct 9 and 10. All events will be held on or near Dock Street.

This year's event includes so many activities for young and old, starting Friday with the Great Pumpkin Dash starting on Dock Street, that includes a two-kilometre route and a five -kilometre route. The Dancing Witches take to the street at 5:30 p.m. and the band, East of Eden will take the stage from 6 ot 8 p.m. at Guild Hall.

"This year we decided to add and change up some events on Friday," said organizer Robin Smith. "Last year we had a movie Friday night, which didn't go over so well. This year we've added the fun race and it is full already, with 100 participants. Then we added some music to go with it."

Saturday, things kick-off at 10 a.m. with the giant pumpkin and squash weigh-ins, along with the measuring for the tallest sunflower award.

Starting at the same time – the Shelburne Museum decided to have an 'opposite' event. They will be hosting a Tiny Turnip festival at the same time as the giant produce is getting weighed in.

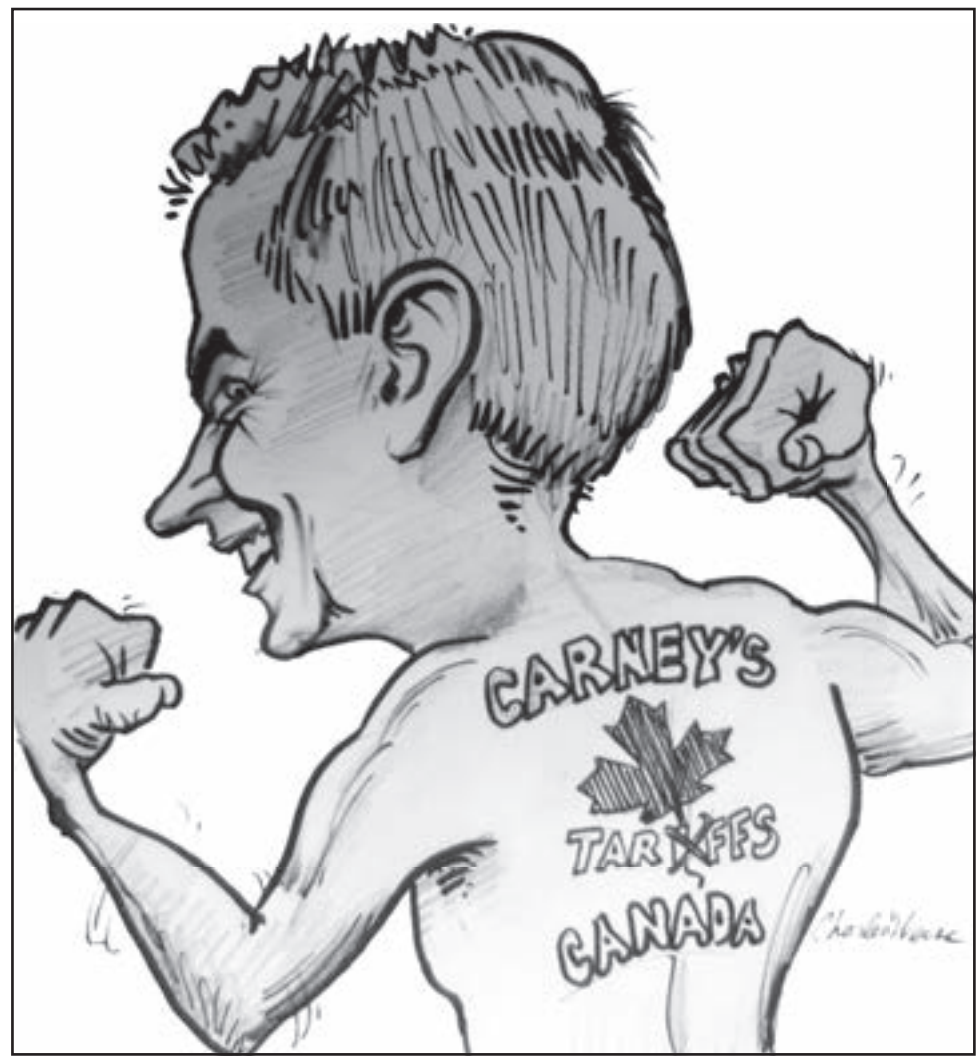

Beginning at 11 a.m. until they are gone, there will be pumpkin carving for the kids.

At 10 a.m., the bouncy houses open; at 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. there will be face painting, balloon animals and the clown whistler.

From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. there will be a try-it pumpkin rowing event for kids.

Also from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. there will be a market at Shelburne Guild Hall with more than 35 vendors offering a wide variety of goods for sale.

Two showings of the Scott's Timber Show will take place at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

SOURCE: FACEBOOK/PUMPKIN REGATTA

The 2026 Nova Scotia Pumpkin Festival and Regatta is right around the corner. These photos were taken at last year's event.

From noon to 1 p.m. you can have a chance to slingshot a pumpkin or apple; from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. there will be children's games and activities at the Sandy Point Recreation Centre.

At 1:30 p.m. there will be a pumpkin derby...you just need to bring a pumpkin to race and you get to roll them down the hill to see whose is the fastest.

Then the highlight of the weekend, the Nova Scotia Giant Pumpkin Regatta. Paddlers will race along the waterfront, followed by an awards' presentation.

As normal, submissions via video were sent to the organizing committee, then put on Facebook for the world to see. This year, there were a total of five submissions, from B.C., Saskatchewan, Massachusetts, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"It's something that shows us that you are interested. It's just a fun thing," said Smith.

Hungry? They have you covered with several different food trucks to choose from opening Friday starting at 5 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m.

Smith said that the event is on an incredible run attracting hundreds of people from all over. Plus, having it on Thanksgiving weekend is a bonus as more friends and family will be flooding the area.

Mayor says shelter running smoothly as town responds to community concerns

The Landing, the 24-hour emergency shelter and supportive housing facility on Elm Street in Bridgewater has been having its ups and downs since this past spring.

"These are nowhere near the issues we had that came from the drop-in centre, but we hear the concerns and are working on solutions," he said.

The town is working with SSODA, the province, Bridgewater Police Service, and other parties to remedy the situation. SSODA has a direct line of communication with the town.

A community roundtable meets regularly, and police regularly communicate with shelter staff. The structure of the shelter has helped keep the problems minimal.

He also encouraged residents who have concerns to contact the police to have the incidents properly recorded.

"Having this information allows us to make the best possible decisions for our community," he added.

On the subject of potential solutions, Mitchell has had discussions with Bridgewater's MP and the federal justice minister concerning changes related to bail and the Criminal Code, as part of a broader effort to address challenges communities across Canada are facing.

At the same time, however, he said that he did not wish to generalize all the public anxieties about homelessness and public disorder to those who were in the shelter.

"The issues we are hearing about are occurring when people are leaving the shelter and are offsite and on their own," he said. "We know that it's a small few creating the problems and I don't want us to label everyone the same."

Homelessness, addiction, and access to support services are complex issues. He said the South Shore lacks some of the specialized resources needed to cope with them.

He pointed to a proposed model in New Glasgow as one he believes could potentially work across the province's health zones.

The chief aim of Bridgewater, said Mitchell, is to prevent the town suffering such a relapse as that which has visited it during the last two years.

"We will not have a repeat of the last two years."

Having an experienced shelter operator, a suitable facility, and established rules for clients gives the community a firmer footing in which to face any further problems that may arise.

"As issues arise we will continue to respond and work collaboratively with the shelter and the police as needed," he added. "Our goal is minimal impact to the community."

Mahone Bay moves ahead with $9M plan to replace aging water pipeline

By YASMIN DUALE
yasmin.duale@southshorebulletin.ca

MAHONE BAY - The Town of Mahone Bay is working to replace an aging raw water line from Oakland Lake. The total cost of the project is estimated at $9 million.

The cast-iron water ducts installed in 1949 are nearing their 80th birthday. While the town says the system remains reliable with no recent issues, the aging of the water artery has prompted the municipal authorities to make its replacement a priority.

"The town's water system remains reliable, with no recent issues reported with the 1949 raw water pipeline from Oakland Lake," project communications specialist Claire-Louise Osmond said in a Sept. 21 statement.

"While the pipeline continues to perform as required, it is well beyond its originally anticipated service life."

The town wishes to replace this line before its condition becomes an emergency. And a new line could be put along the rail trail system, thus avoiding expensive and complicated road excavations.

The project is dependent on finding substantial external funding. The town has already received a provincial and federal allocation through the Investing in Canada Infrastructure Program, but this has not yet been spent.

September 30, 1942

The annual Harvest Service was held in the United Church, Crousetown on Wednesday evening. The Church was beautifully decorated with vegetables and flowers. Rev. MacKay, Petite Riviere, gave a very interesting address.

During the latter part of the summer holidays Miss Mona Strum, school vice-principal and two friends from Stellarton, N.S. were on a bicycle tour over Prince Edward Island, and had a most enjoyable trip. They were gone about one week and covered over 200 miles. They left Parrsboro, on to Amherst, took boat at Cape Tormentine to Borden; from Montague to Pictou. Between Summerside and Charlottetown the scenery was particularly attractive. They reported having a good time and a good tour.

The Young people's Society of the Baptist Church entertained Friday in the Sunday School Hall in honor of the English and Scotch soldiers Who were billeted for the past week at Green Shutters. The took the form of a "War Services Track Meet," in which the competitive spirit was featured throughout the evening's proceedings. The team representing the army, and by Miss Irene Ernst, carried off the honors with a total of 35 points.

Mrs.T. Ott. the Rectory, has the sympathy of the community in the death on Wednesday of her father, H.A. Wright of Ottawa. Mr. Wright was an employee of the Mines and Resources Dept, and great great grand-son of Philemon Wright, founder of Hull, Quebec. He was a veteran of the South African and First Great Wars.

Please take notice that a public information meeting will be held regarding proposed changes to private road design and construction standards and amendments to the Subdivision By-law to implement the policies of the Municipal Planning Strategy (MPS):

Public Information Session
Date: October 8, 2026
Time: 6:00 pm
Location: Council Chambers, Municipal Office, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville

At this meeting, planning staff will provide an overview of the proposed changes to the Municipality's private road design and construction standards and the Subdivision By-law. For more information, visit engage.modl.ca/private-road-design-and-construction-standards or contact Jeff Merrill at planning@modl.ca or (902) 541-1325.

Area affected: The proposed amendments apply to the entire municipality.

Synopsis: Changes to the private road design and construction standards to balance public safety and infrastructure expectations with the cost of development and project feasibility. General amendments to the subdivision by-law to bring policies from the MPS into effect that protect water supplies and agriculturally zoned properties.

Mahone Bay moves ahead with $9M plan to replace aging water pipeline

In addition, a grant has been applied for through the Build Communities Strong Fund of the federal government.

If sufficient contributions were secured, the project could be put out to tender as soon as 2027.

The water utility is expected to contribute between $2 million and $3 million. This contribution would be financed through borrowing over the life of the new infrastructure, and the payment for this would be collected from the water rates.

Any changes to the water rates that are part of this process will be subject to the supervision of the Nova Scotia Regulatory and Appeals Tribunal.

The replacement of the raw water pipeline is part of a much larger set of infrastructure challenges that the town is tackling, especially water, wastewater and stormwater management.

In a recent Asset Management Committee update, the town stated that water was a critical problem, pointing to aging infrastructure, the need for new pipes to accommodate residential growth, and the threat of flooding from land and sea.

The committee, which includes council and public members, advises the council on infrastructure priorities and the procedures to be used to develop major projects.

A further considerable operation is the Main Street West Water/Wastewater Project, which extends to the intersection of Edgewater Street and Main Street, and includes a short section of raw waterline.

This will cost the town at least $18 million, in addition to the $9-million replacement of the Oakland Lake pipeline.

Replacing the West Main Street infrastructure will require road excavation. According to the last report from the town, the sewer and water mains in West Main Street are old and small. The area is vulnerable to flooding from the large area drained by the surrounding basin.

The planning of stormwater retention ponds to control the flow of heavy rainfall and runoff is being developed.

Coastal flooding is also a concern. It is quite possible that, in a major storm, downtown could be inundated during high tide. The Edgewater Project was intended as the first defence of the inhabitants against major storm events, but additional protection is being considered along Main Street, the tidal section of Ernst Brook and the town-owned section of highway toward Mader's Cove, where coastal erosion is a concern.

Officials have also chosen the former Inchcape Island, now reduced to Inchcape Shoal, as a place where it may be possible to take measures against the energy of the waves.

Considering the extent of the necessary work, Mahone Bay will probably have to rely on a combination of public funds and municipal borrowing.

The town had pointed out in its latest statement that every million borrowed at the prevailing rate of interest costs $60,000 a year.

At the same time, the residential construction would provide more income, in the form of property taxes, to help support the town's infrastructure investments. Plans for the Edgewater and Clearland Road areas and other places in the town are either approved or in advanced planning stages.

For now, council has prioritized the raw water pipeline project, with the town looking for funds and preparing to finance its share of the cost before the aging infrastructure becomes an emergency.

"Mahone Bay's water system is working today," Osmond said, "and the town is planning responsibly to ensure it continues to serve the community reliably for decades to come."

Documentary brings photographer's story to the big screen

Todd Langille with his studio camera and prop double.

BRIDGEWATER - For Todd Langille, the story of the photographer Frank Elam Garber began with a picture of his grandparents.

Around 1995, Langille discovered the existence of Garber's work, when, following the death of his grandparents, he found a wedding photograph of them. Seeing them like this, as young people, motivated Langille to discover the story of his ancestors.

He soon discovered that three generations of his family on both sides had been photographed at different ages.

But it was a reference to Garber in a 1988 anniversary edition of the South Shore Bulletin that turned Langille's little interest into a great project.

It stated that a King Street studio fire in 1952 destroyed Garber's photographic negatives and much of his equipment. Langille, a recent graduate of the Film and Television program at Niagara College, saw a case for a story there.

In 1998, he began to build a digital archive of Garber's pictures by piecing together the remaining images that were scattered throughout the community.

"It was 1998 and I set out to rebuild a digital archive of his photographs from images I could locate in the public, knowing that they were sure to reveal a great story on my hometown of Bridgewater," said Langille.

In family collections, Garber's photographs had survived as framed scenic prints, postcards and newspaper reproductions. The DesBrisay Museum also possessed a considerable collection of them.

During his visits from Western Canada, he renewed the hunt with his father, Glen Langille, who had lived in Bridgewater all his life, and who helped make local connections.

In the summer of 1999, Langille interviewed nearly 20 town residents who had lived through the era and were connected with Garber's subjects. Many of these interviewees have died since then.

Their memories, today, have become part of the historical record captured in Langille's documentary, The Town Photographer.

The film follows Garber's work during roughly 50 years of change in Bridgewater, beginning shortly after the fire that destroyed King Street in 1899. During the course of his career, Garber documented the transformation of the town from horse-drawn transport to automobiles, two world wars, the Great Depression, and numerous other fires.

The new photographs were from Garber's descendants, Langille said, and added a new dimension to his collection.

"He started documenting this town as its main street was rebuilding from scratch," he said. "From there it was an incredible 50 years of major growth, changes, and evolution."

The film also drew parallels between Garber's work and Langille's own experience of watching Bridgewater change.

Garber had photographed some of the same locations at five-year intervals to document the town's evolution. Langille has introduced into his film comparative "then and now" studies using Garber's photographs alongside his own footage.

The project eventually went beyond mere research. In 2025, Langille pitched the documentary to Bell Fibe TV1, which paid for its completion. Local actors and crew were brought in to recreate scenes from Garber's life, with sets for his studio, office and darkroom reconstructed inside Wesley United Church in Petite Riviere.

Five local actors played Garber at various stages of his life, and more than 20 extras portrayed portrait clients of his day.

After research and production work that has taken almost 30 years, Langille hopes that the documentary will inspire viewers to study more attentively the story of their family and the past of Bridgewater.

"I hope the viewer will experience the same feeling of surprise and curiosity about Bridgewater as I did," he said.

The Town Photographer will have a local premiere at the DesBrisay Museum on Saturday, Oct. 3. It will also be available to Bell Fibe subscribers through Fibe TV1 OnDemand, under the Atlantic section, in six parts.

This premiere will be accompanied by a photo exhibition of the pictures by Garber, which had been the starting point of Langille's long-standing desire to tell this story.

White Lotus brings Tai cuisine to the South Shore

WANDA ATKINSON
Roaming Appetite

White Lotus popped onto the local food scene approximately 12 months ago with authentic Thai and Vietnamese cuisine. They not only live up to their claims of fresh ingredients, authentic traditions and warm hospitality, but exceed it.

The restaurant is tastefully decorated with striking tropical fauna wallpaper, well-appointed greenery, natural screens dividing the room for a cozier experience. Comfortable upholstered booths are supplemented with table seating.

The selection of appetizers is pure temptation - too irresistible to turn down. Pork spring rolls are deep fried golden brown and taste wise, beyond comparison. Two spring rolls, each cut in half, make up a total of four mouth-watering pieces. The sweet dipping sauce is house-made and the perfect compliment.

Fresh spring rolls are packed with pristine ingredients of veggies, herbs, noodles, chicken or shrimp, wrapped in rice paper and served with a peanut sauce. Lemongrass chicken wings, a great sharable, are served with fish sauce and Thai sweet chili sauce.

Mango salad is a Thai favourite, with its namesake fruit, long beans, cherry tomatoes, dried shrimp, peanuts, garlic, fish sauce and salad dressing. For a basic salad the Thai style garden salad with Thai dressing is crisp and tasty.

White Lotus proudly offers another Thai staple, tom yum soup, including a hard-to-find ingredient galangal which sets authentic soups apart from lesser versions. Also on the menu are Thai coconut chicken or vegetable soup.

Pad Kra Prao, considered to be Thailand's ultimate comfort food with a spicy, savoury and aromatic flavour profile, along with Cashew stir-fried dishes, are traditional treasures.

Pad Thai, recognized as a national dish and commonly served as a street food in its home country, made a one of the world's 50 most delicious foods list. The tastes of hot, sour, sweet and salty is a delectable combination. Other noodle dishes are pad see ew and pad kee mow.

Thai curries are world renown and options include red curry, green curry, and massaman curry. All curries are made with a coconut base and added shrimp paste for a delicate umami taste. Each order comes with a heaping serving of jasmine rice, creating a very filling meal.

Fried rice is a step up with added vegetables and cooked in various sauces and pastes for additional flavour. Add a protein such as chicken, beef, shrimp to the mixture and you have a dish such as green curry fried rice and shrimp or khao pad klook with beef.

An entire page is dedicated to Pho, made with rice noodles and a beef broth. Choose your protein or protein combination. Beef selections include rare beef, beef brisket, beef ball and tender beef. Shrimp, chicken and vegetables are additional options.

White Lotus is located at 28 Davidson Drive in Bridgewater.

HARVEST MOON FESTIVAL A HIT!

The annual Harvest Moon Festival was a massive hit once again with hundreds of people checking out some great music along the riverfront at Pijinuiskaq Park in downtown Bridgewater Sept. 18-19. Attendees enjoyed music from Diggin' Up Grubs, Hirtle, DeeDee Austin and headliner Neon Dreams Saturday night. There was also a number of youth taking the stage and a youth market was held Saturday afternoon, along with a food truck party. Shown here is the group Neon Dreams.

LIVERPOOL – Work to change the troublesome intersection at Main and Market streets in Liverpool is scheduled to begin this week, but at least one business owner wants municipal officials to rethink their plan.

Residents have called for years for the Region of Queens to make the busy three-way stop safer for pedestrians. Many people have reported close calls and some collisions.

A 79-year-old woman was hospitalized in January 2024 after being struck in a crosswalk at the intersection.

So, after spending $24,000 to hire a consultant to do a traffic study on the area in February 2025, councillors voted last fall to: remove the separate westbound or right-turning lane on Main Street in front of the post office and add a curb extension to shorten the crosswalk distance and to make pedestrians more visible; add tactile walking surface indicators to warn visually impaired pedestrians they're entering or leaving a crosswalk; and change some of the parking in front of the post office.

The region sent letters to area residents and businesses last week telling them the work will begin on Sept. 28.

Kristopher Snarby, whose Exit Realty office is right across from the post office, says the municipality's planned fixes will only add to traffic congestion.

"Before they invest money making all these changes, why not just barricade the turning lane and see how it works from a practical point of view?" he said in an interview.

"If they could block that lane off for a week or two and see how it impacts the traffic, then we can see first-hand whether or not it's going to work."

Snarby raised the issue in a public post on his personal Facebook page that has generated more than 100 comments.

Snarby says he realizes there are safety issues with the crosswalks in the area, so he suggests installing speed bumps on the approach to the crosswalk leading from the post office to make cars slow down.

"That's what a lot of communities do. You go to cities in Quebec and they're everywhere. Or maybe eliminating that one crosswalk. I just think there are other things that could have been done, instead of bottlenecking Main Street. It's just going to be really difficult to navigate."

The issue was also raised at the Sept. 22 regional council meeting. District 3 Coun. Courtney Wentzell questioned whether the approach councillors agreed to months ago was still the right one.

Adam Grant, the municipality's traffic authority and director of infrastructure, said the main goal was to make the area safer, while minimizing the impact on traffic.

"The proposed work has been designed, recommended and considered for improving pedestrian safety first and foremost while having a minimal or negligible impact to motor vehicle movements."

But Snarby says it's tough enough now for cars to exit the parking spaces at the post office at busy traffic times and he worries getting rid of the turning lane will make it worse.

"I'm not an engineer, I don't claim to be, but I just know when I'm there on the ground and you're watching people try to maneuver that with two lanes. Changing to one lane, I think you're just going to see a huge backlog of traffic and it's just going to snarl things up even worse. I can't visualize how it's gonna work. I hope I'm wrong. I hope this does work."

Mayor Scott Christian said municipal officials relied on traffic experts and followed through on their recommendations.

"We're responding to what are known and serious safety concerns at that intersection. We spent the money to study it. Evidence-based recommendations came back and we're implementing them as appropriate. So, from my perspective, this is good decision making."

Please take notice:

On September 8, 2026, Council conducted First Reading of proposed amendments to the Osprey Village Secondary Planning Strategy and Land Use By-law affecting municipally owned land identified as PID 60631009. The proposed amendments would redesignate and rezone portions of the property from the High-Density Residential zone to General Commercial and Open Space zones. The amendments would also permit development using on-site services.

A PUBLIC INFORMATION SESSION will be held to provide residents with an opportunity to learn more about the proposed changes.

Date: October 1st, 2026

Time: 6:00-7:00 PM

Location: Council Chambers, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville

A PUBLIC HEARING will also be held regarding the proposed amendments.

Date: October 13, 2026

Time: 5:30 PM

Location: Council Chambers, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville

The public can make formal written or oral submissions to Council through the public hearing process. Written submissions will be received until 5:00 p.m. on Friday October 9, 2026, and may be submitted to April Whynot-Lohnes, Municipal Clerk, 10 Allée Champlain Drive, Cookville, NS B4V 9E4 or by email: planning@modl.ca. Oral submissions will be received at the time and place of the Hearing. Council can make a decision regarding the proposed amendments to the Osprey Village Secondary Planning Strategy and Land Use By-law affecting PID 60631009 following the Public Hearing.

Some cats prefer to be the only cat

ASHLEY KIPPERS
SHAID Tree Animal Shelter General Manager

In a world where we're often told that cats need a feline friend, it's worth remembering that some cats are perfectly happy being the only cat in the castle. No sharing their favourite person, no competition for the sunny window seat, and absolutely no negotiating over who gets the best spot on the couch.

There can be some real advantages to having just one cat, too. Your feline companion gets all the attention, playtime, and affection you have to offer, and you'll have a clearer picture of their eating habits, health and daily routines. There's also no need to manage introductions or navigate disagreements between cats. For busy households, or anyone who simply prefers one furry companion – a solo cat can be a wonderful fit.

Meet Bertha, SHAID Animal Shelter's featured cat this week, and a queen who knows what she wants! This beautiful two-year-old, medium-haired tuxedo girl has a sassy side and she is a sweetheart.

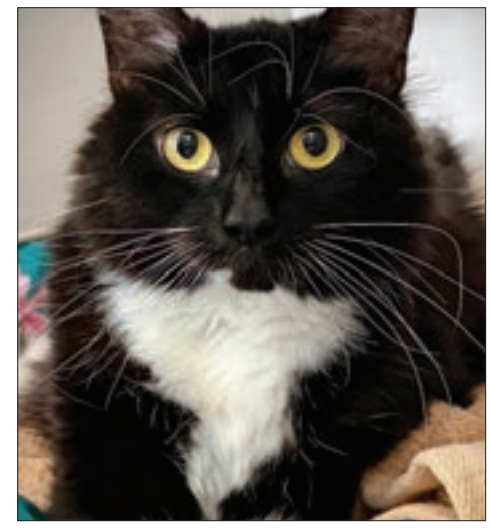

Bertha can be shy when meeting new people and may bring a little "spice" to the first introduction. But as she grows comfortable, we're seeing more of her curious, charming personality every day. She's making lovely progress and just needs someone willing to let her set the pace.

Bertha would prefer to be the only pet in a calm, quiet home, without dogs or young children. A less chaotic environment will help her feel secure, while a patient person who respects her boundaries will give her the chance to blossom. And once she's settled in, her mix of sass and sweetness is sure to keep her person entertained.

Now, Bertha may be willing to make a small exception to her royal decree: a quiet, respectful cat who admires her greatness from a comfortable distance might be tolerated. But let's be clear, Bertha would still expect to be queen, and any potential feline roommate should be prepared to pay proper tribute by leaving her favourite spots and people to her.

At SHAID, we know that every animal has their own personality and needs. Finding the right match takes time, and community support helps us provide the care and patience animals need while they wait for their forever homes. Adoption, fostering, volunteering, and donations all make a difference.

If your home is peaceful, your heart is open, and you're ready to welcome a queen who prefers to rule solo, Bertha may be the cat for you. She is patiently waiting for her future palace.

Can we choose our feelings?

SUSANNE BECK
Reality Check

Do you remember grammar lessons? For most of us, I suspect it's been a while since we've thought much about nouns and verbs and the rest of it. However, anyone whose livelihood depends on selling products, telling stories or influencing in some way would be well aware of the importance of choosing their words carefully.

In some cases, people choose words and phrases to evoke specific emotions. A sales person might paint a verbal picture of serenity in an effort to sell a house. A political figure may attempt to rouse pride, patriotism, envy or even anger with their slogans.

The rest of us use words to communicate emotions too. Sometimes it's love, appreciation, and joy. Other times, it's displeasure, sadness, or disgust. Clearly, our words affect our interactions with others. But they can have another powerful effect that might be less obvious. What's that?

The words we choose can influence the way we think about ourselves: our outlook, our possibilities, and ultimately, our satisfaction.

In his book "Choice Theory," Dr. Glasser writes about choices (big surprise, eh?) However, what you might find surprising is that he includes some brief comments about grammar.

Think about the words we typically use to discuss emotions. For example, we might say, "I'm depressed," or "I'm anxious," or "I'm angry." Those words imply that we don't have a lot of choice; feelings just happen. We can't help it. The emotion is in charge. We're the victim here.

According to Glasser, traditional descriptions for emotions use passive words rather than active words. And passive words can lead us to believe that our distressing emotions, those feelings that are contributing to our misery, are beyond our control.

Instead, Glasser recommends that we choose active words as they can help us realize that we do have choices. What words and phrases? Instead of saying, for example, "I'm anxious," Glasser suggests that we say, "I am anxietying," or "I'm choosing to be anxious."

Those active words such as anxietying, depressing, angering, are not exactly familiar, are they? Even Glasser admits that this alternative language sounds cumbersome. In fact, I'd be surprised if you ever heard words of this sort outside of a group of Choice Theory aficionados.

Familiar or not, this interesting question remains. Does "choosing anger" or "choosing anxiety" actually reflect reality more accurately than "I'm angry," or "I'm anxious"? When you're feeling miserable, it may not feel like you are "choosing misery." Yet expressing it as a choice could help us realize that we do, in fact, have other options.

For example, when I say, "I am choosing to be anxious," I'm also opening up other possibilities, such as "But I could choose differently. I could choose to be courageous. I could choose to be optimistic. I could choose to be confident."

As Glasser writes, "To be depressed or neurotic is passive. It happened to us; we are its victim, and we have no control over it." If that's the message we're sending to ourselves, then it follows that we would believe that we can't do anything.

However, Choice Theory is fundamentally about choice. We don't have freedom of choice in everything, but sometimes we have more opportunities to choose than we previously believed.

Glasser associates "to choose" with a very basic idea: If you can choose one thing, then you can choose something else, something better. As he says, "A choice theory world is a tough, responsible world; you cannot use grammar to escape responsibility for what you are doing."

What do you think? Can we choose our feelings? If so, would we want to? Let me know at choice@focusonclarity.com or by mail c/o South Shore Bulletin.

To your choices! ~ Susanne ~

A Brier Island weekend

JAMES HIRTLE
Bird Notes

I led a field trip for Brier Island from Sept. 18-20. On Sept. 18 it started off as a rainy day. The forecast was that it was supposed to clear by around noon or in the afternoon on Brier Island.

Due to the rain by the time, I reached Gulliver's Cove on Digby Neck I had seen only eight species of birds. Gulliver's Cove doubled my number of species for the day and I picked up several American kestrels there along with a sharp-shinned hawk and a northern harrier. I also found a clay-coloured sparrow. I normally would have slowly birded Digby Neck, but the weather turned again going down the rest of the neck.

I arrived on Brier Island way earlier than I normally would. My normal arrival time would have been between 3 and 5 p.m. I arrived on the island at 1 p.m. this time around. It was really foggy. The rest of the day I spent rounding up participants that had arrived on the island and by 5 p.m. had a group of 13.

For the rest of the day, birding was slow on the island with about 31 species of birds. Logan LaLonde had found some good birds on the Seal Cove Trail, such as a blue-winged warbler, a northern house wren, bobolinks and a Tennessee warbler. By the time we arrived at the location none of these birds were around and had moved somewhere else or left the island.

On Sept. 19 I met with the group behind the Brier Island Lodge. We headed to the North Light. At first it seemed like it might be a slow day. Then the sky erupted with birds. We saw lots of pelagic birds from shore as well as a few humpback whales.

There were lots of northern gannets streaming by and we could see some great shearwaters. Logan Lalonde saw some Manx shearwaters, but that was before my group arrived.

By 10 a.m. Logan had recorded 68 species of birds. A Caspian tern was seen flying by and later gave great viewing as it set down on an exposed rock face on the shoreline. We saw 225 cedar waxwings. There were tons of warblers coming in and going out. Logan LaLonde knew what they were from the calls and could identify them from the air.

Sadly, I'm not that good with warblers in flight and cannot hear a lot of them now, so could not count many of what he called out. There were large numbers of black-throated green warblers, blackpoll warblers, Cape May warblers and bay-breasted warblers.

I did get to see all of these when they came up in sight for a short time only. Of course there were other warblers. An olive-sided flycatcher was exciting. We also had some red-eyed vireos and blue-headed vireos.

The exciting ones though were several eastern warbling vireos and Philadelphia vireos. An indigo bunting was a treat as was a Lincoln's sparrow. There were numbers of chipping sparrows around also.

We got to see a few eastern phoebes and there were peregrine falcons, broad-winged hawks, northern harriers, sharp-shinned hawks, merlins, American kestrels and a low flyover of a northern goshawk was a new bird for many in the group.

We also saw an osprey and some bald eagles. I missed the kettles of broad-winged hawks with my group. One kettle consisted of about 150 broad-winged hawks, but a few members who were in the right spot got to see them.

With the group we did get to see large numbers of sharp-shinned hawks and some numbers of American kestrels at the West Light as these birds were moving through. A lot of us went on the 4:30 pelagic. It was one of the worst ones that I've been on for seabirds.

We only saw double-crested cormorants, black guillemots, northern gannets, American herring gulls, great black-backed gulls, some red-necked and red phalaropes, a great blue heron and one Atlantic puffin.

A lot of my group wanted to see a puffin, but although it flew close to the boat, I only was able to get two others on it. The boat did not slow down at all and focused on whales of which we saw lots of humpbacked whales and white-sided dolphins. Since the whales were close to shore, the boat did not focus much on birds.

So the trip was disappointing. For the day I saw 48 species of birds. Logan LaLonde had a dickcissel and a mourning warbler. I also spoke to someone who had a solitary sandpiper. Others did see several other species that I had not seen.

For the weekend, there were about 89 species that I know of. I'm sure that I missed a few birds so that figure is likely much higher.

On Sept. 20 I again met with my group behind the Brier Island Lodge and we headed off to Northern Light. Birding was much slower than the day before. I did record 39 species before leaving the island. We saw several species that had not been see the day before by the group. Most of the group had not seen American pipits before, so we were able to get some close-up views of these birds. On Sunday I headed out early and birded my way back Digby Neck. I did pick up a number of species on the way back through that were not on Brier Island such as ring-necked duck, wood duck, green-winged teal, hooded merganser, downy woodpecker, turkey vulture, red-tailed hawk, ring-billed gull and pileated woodpecker. I ended the day with about 55 species.

On Sept. 16 Kevin Lantz discovered a common gallinule at Steverman's Lake in Lilydale. On Sept. 19 Avery Naggy-McArthur spotted two Caspian terns flying along at the mouth of the LaHave River at the Fort Point Museum. On Sept. 20 Kevin Lantz had a sizeable movement of birds go through his yard at Front Centre. The best of these migrants were blackpoll warbler, Lincoln's sparrow and Philadelphia vireo.

Mark Dennis saw a blue-winged warbler in his yard at Clam Point, Cape Sable Island. On Sept. 22 Bill Crosby of Lockeport observed a lark sparrow. Paul Harmon still had a ruby-throated hummingbird on Sept. 23 in Petite Riviere. I had a nice grouping of migrants with a yellow-bellied sapsucker at East Port Medway.

In Cape Breton the white ibis continued as of Sept. 22. Rarer birds in the Halifax Municipality since the last column were buff-breasted sandpipers, blue-grey gnatcatchers, olive-sided flycatcher, northern house wren, Wilson's warbler, dickcissel, American golden plover, eastern phoebe, eastern warbling vireo, eastern wood pewee, northern waterthrushes, prairie warbler and pied-billed grebe.

The northeast mainland had white-crowned sparrow. Yarmouth and Digby County had brown thrasher, Carolina wren, lark sparrows, gray-cheeked thrush, northern mockingbird, Baltimore oriole and Bonaparte's gull.

On Sept. 23 Logan LaLonde had 760 broad-winged hawks pass over his house on Brier Island. The Valley reported stilt sandpiper, Philadelphia vireo, buff-breasted sandpiper and eastern warbling vireo.

What they say when you walk away

STEPHANIE MILLER VINCENT
Business Moments

A friend told me a story last week that I haven't been able to shake.

Diane and Gord went for dinner at a restaurant that wears its values proudly: local, seasonal, community-first. They sat for 10 minutes before anyone came to the table. There was no drink menu and no drink order. Gord ordered the house-made gnocchi, and at $34 neither of them blinked. Then the plate arrived with five gnocchi on it. Five. Gord was finished in under 10 minutes and their server never came back to ask how things were.

Gord is one of the kindest men you'll ever meet, so he did what kind people do. He went home and sent a polite e-mail about the portion. He didn't mention the service or say anything sharp, just the plate. No one replied. A week later he left a review, and that got an answer. The manager wrote back with the restaurant's mission, a list of reasons, and an invitation to return. A week after that a second email arrived: I owe you an apology. The chef had been away and whoever filled in had changed the dish.

It's worth pausing on the order of things. The private e-mail was met with silence, and the public review was met with a response.

They booked lunch. The manager nudged them toward dinner, calling it the better menu, but lunch is what worked for them. The instructions were simple: when you arrive, let the host know and I'll come to see you.

Diane told the host twice that they had a reservation. The host never looked at the book. Within five minutes of being seated, Diane and Gord heard her tell the three servers on the floor that she was heading home to let her dogs out and would be back at one. It was the middle of lunch service.

There were two tables in the room and three servers. One was at the computer kiosk, one was holding a cloth, and one was leaning on the bar, but no one offered them drinks. Gord asked if the manager was in. "He comes and goes," the server said. Could she let him know they were here? She said she would if she saw him.

The food came, no one checked in. When they finished, they sat for another half hour, waiting, curious how long it would take. When the server finally drifted over to ask if they were ready for the bill, they explained that the meal was meant to be comped. "That's fine," she said, and walked away. Ten feet later she turned back to wish them a great day.

Gord had taken out cash for the tip. He put it back in his pocket.

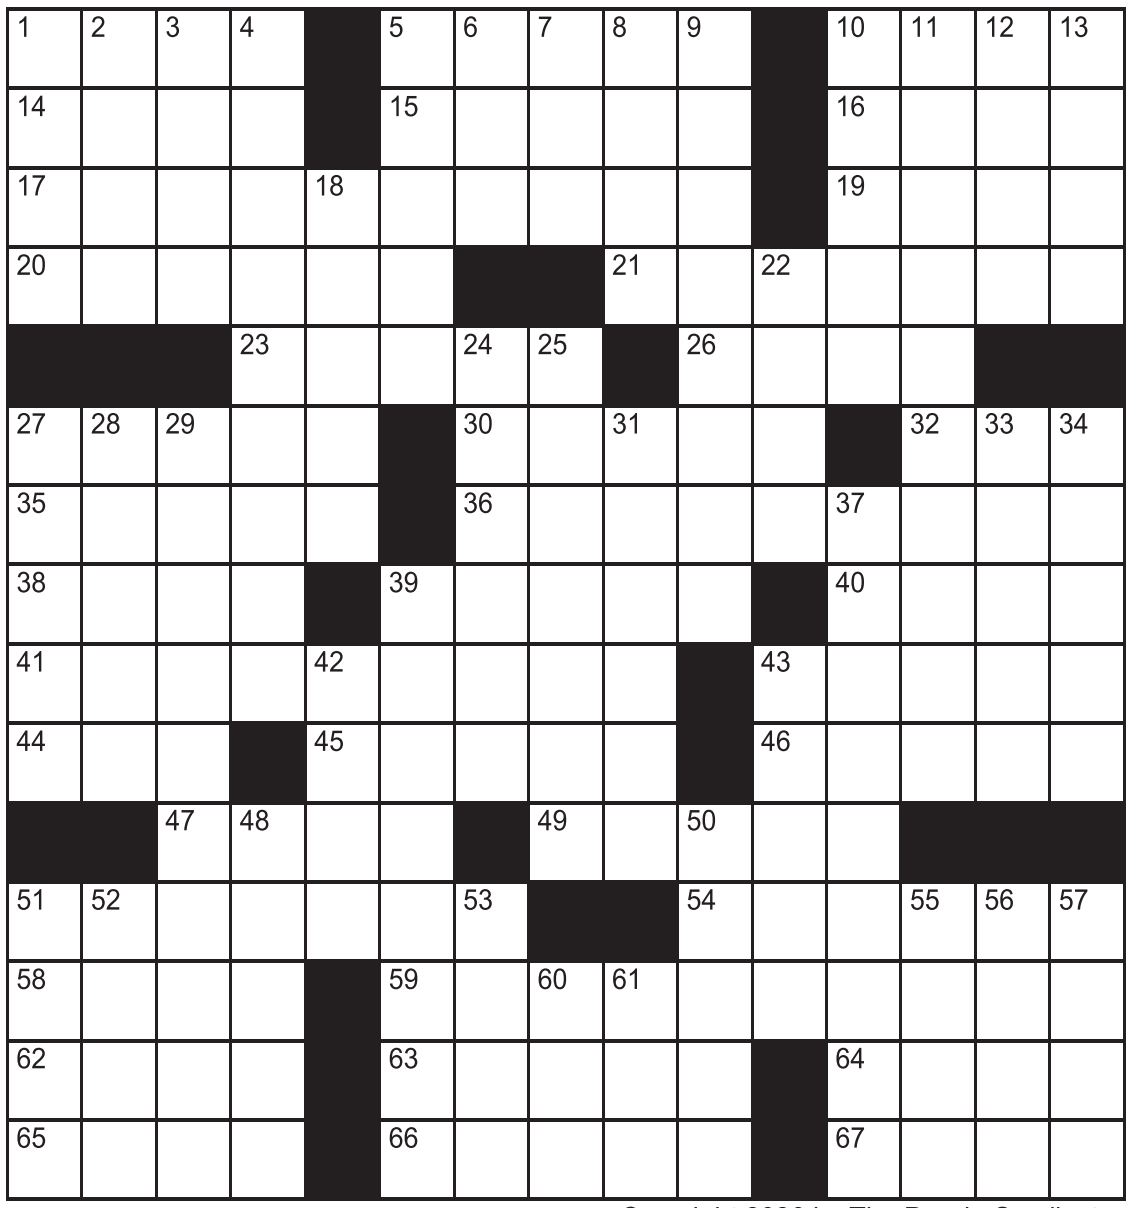

The manager never came and he never followed up. Later, Diane heard from a friend whose daughter serves there that the restaurant is short-staffed, and that four tables had recently gotten up and walked out because service was so slow.

OBITUARIES

Virginia Rose Seamone

It is with great sadness that we announce the passing of Virginia (Ginny) Rose Seamone, of Branch LaHave, on September 15, 2026, at the age of 96. Ginny was born in Branch LaHave on June 17, 1930, to Charles (Keith) and Jenny Grace. She was the last surviving member of her immediate family.

Ginny is predeceased by her loving husband of 70 years, Earl; her brothers, Dalton, Lawrence, Robert, Donald, William (Bill), Granville, and her second eldest brother, who died in infancy. She is survived by her children, Paulette (Harvey, deceased), Gary (Laura Lee), and Donna; her grandchildren, Jeff (Jo-Anne), Darren, Benjamin (Jennifer), Luke (Erin); and great grandchildren, Lauren, Kate (Chris), Adam, Elliott, Henry, Evelyn, and Grace. Ginny also leaves to mourn special friends, Julia, Linda & Vincent, Vickie & Vernon, Shelley & Donnie, sisters-in-law, Anne and Patsy Grace, as well as several nieces & nephews.

Ginny was profoundly loving. For those who met her, she was known for her kindness, sweetness, and gentle nature. She had a smile that made anyone feel as though they were welcome. For those who knew her well, she was known for her quick wit, her feistiness, and her strength. She created a home filled with laughter, love and warmth. As a doting mother, she cared for her children and husband, but also her parents and Earl's uncle & aunt. She took great pride in her vibrant gardens, and loved spending time on the Christmas tree land, working and walking alongside Earl, nurturing the smaller trees, just as she did her family. She was also a devoted grandmother and great grandmother. She followed with great interest all the adventures of her family, attending as many of their sports games as she could, even up to the age of 93.

Ginny was a vital part of Branch LaHave, always volunteering her time at community events and charities. At the age of 50, she was asked to join Parkview Education Centre as a cashier where she continued to embody her love and kindness in interactions with students and staff.

At the death of her husband, Ginny moved to live with her daughter, Donna, in Canning, where she received excellent care and companionship. Although she no longer had a garden of her own, Gary continued to bring her mayflowers every Spring, and her friends brought bouquets when they visited. She enjoyed listening to music, watching curling, game shows, and the news, cuddling her kitties, and looking at pictures of the family she created.

She leaves behind a legacy of love, and a commitment to her family. The family would like to thank her caregivers Ashley and Heidi, as well as the VON staff that attended to her needs. A special thanks to Dr Diane Edmonds for not only taking care of her medical needs, but also for her care and affection. A special thanks to the doctors and nurses at the Valley Regional Hospital who treated Ginny with wonderful care, compassion, and integrity in her final hours.

No funeral by request. A Celebration of Life will be held at a later date for both Ginny and Earl. Donations can be made to SHAID Animal Shelter, New Germany Lions Club, or VON.

Arrangements entrusted to Sweeny's Funeral Home, Bridgewater, where online condolences may be left at www.sweenysfuneralhome.com

What they say when you walk away

Their lunch wasn't a bad day. It was a pattern.

It would be easy to blame the servers, and I'd ask you not to. Those servers weren't failing their guests. They were doing exactly what they had been shown. No one taught them that an invited guest is a second chance, not a free lunch. No one stood beside them on a slow Monday and showed them what community-first looks like at table six. When the person in charge leaves in the middle of a rush to let the dogs out, the team learns what matters. When the manager promises to come and doesn't, the team learns that promises are optional.

Every business has two conversations going on about its leader, whether that leader is in the room or not. The first is what the team says when the leader walks away. We'll never hear what those servers say about their manager, but we don't need to. A team that describes its leader with "he comes and goes" has already told us. Disengagement rarely announces itself. More often it just stands at the kiosk.

The second is what guests say when they walk out the door. On the drive home, Gord, the man who looks for the good in everyone, turned to Diane and asked, "This is really bad, isn't it?" Four tables walked out. A server's parent heard about it. And now it's in a newspaper column. Your reputation isn't built in your dining room. It's built in the car on the drive home, and what your team experiences is what your guests will describe, every time.

This manager was handed a recovery on a plate. The guests had already forgiven the gnocchi and booked the table. He didn't lose that in the kitchen. He lost it by not showing up.

If you lead a team, here's where I'd start this week. Read your mission out loud, then walk your floor and ask whether they match. When you invite a guest back, own that: put it in your calendar, tell your team, and be at the door, because a comp without your presence is a coupon, not a recovery. Answer the email before the review. Private feedback is a gift, and if you only respond in public, you're managing optics rather than guests. Train for the empty room, too, because slow shifts are where habits form. If your team only performs when it's busy, you haven't trained service, you've trained survival. And finally, ask yourself what your team would say about you if they knew you'd never hear it, then pay attention to what they don't say.

The first disappointment came from a chef's absence. The second was undone by a leader's.

So, owner, manager: what do they say when you walk away?

OBITUARIES

Bruce Fred Corkum

It is with profound sadness and broken hearts that the family of Bruce Fred Corkum, 78, of Oakhill, announces his passing on September 20, 2026, at South Shore Regional Hospital, Bridgewater.

Bruce was born in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, on March 10, 1948, to Fred and Hazel Corkum. He grew up in First South and Centre, where he attended the one-room Centre School and later the new Centre Consolidated School. He began his working life at the age of 15 with Quality Poultry, later working in the maintenance department at Fishermen's Memorial Hospital. In 1976, Bruce began a 30-year career with Michelin Tire Canada in Bridgewater, and the family made their home in Oakhill.

While working at Fishermen's Memorial Hospital, Bruce met and fell in love with Judy. They were married in Williamsdale, Nova Scotia, on June 19, 1971, and began their life together in Lunenburg, where their two daughters, Melissa and Peggy, were born. His girls were the light of his life, and he was endlessly proud of them. As a family, they spent summers camping and making wonderful memories, later enjoying travel to Alaska, Europe, where Bruce developed a special love for Switzerland, and later to Kenya and South Africa. He and Judy also treasured road trips, including memorable journeys to Washington, D.C., and New Orleans, with a special stop at Graceland, the home of his idol, Elvis Presley.

Bruce loved the outdoors. Whether camping, fishing, hunting with his grandfather, cycling back roads with Judy, sitting quietly on the deck listening to the birds and watching the squirrels, or strolling through the woods, he found peace and joy in nature. He also enjoyed photography and travel, and in retirement generously gave his time helping friends with their Christmas tree business. After retiring, he joined the Oakhill Fire Auxiliary and greatly enjoyed the camaraderie of volunteering his time at catering and fundraising events until COVID brought those gatherings to an end.

Bruce loved watching *M*A*S*H* and collected the entire series so he could enjoy it again and again. He was also a devoted fan of Elvis and his music, owning almost every record Elvis recorded. These simple pleasures, along with time spent with family and friends, reflected the warmth, humour, and loyalty that those who knew him will remember so fondly.

Bruce is survived by his beloved wife of 55 years, Judy (Purdy); daughters, Melissa Corkum of Islamabad, Pakistan and Peggy (Tim) Szumlanski of Milton, Ontario; grandsons, Avery and Mason; brother, Robert Corkum of Dartmouth, nieces, Krista (Odin) and Kelley (Alex); cousin, Catherine Smith of Lunenburg and his extended family. He was predeceased by his parents, Fred and Hazel Corkum; and sister-in-law, Bernice Corkum.

Bruce's family wishes to express their heartfelt thanks to the many doctors, nurses, hospital staff, and VON nurses who provided such compassionate care over the past 10 years. Their kindness and support meant so much during an extremely difficult time.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to VON Lunenburg County, the Oncology Department at South Shore Regional Hospital, Feed Nova Scotia, or a charity of your choice.

Bruce received many blood and platelet transfusions throughout his battle with Leukemia, and with every transfusion he was grateful to the donors who made them possible. Please consider donating blood if you are able.

Funeral arrangements have been entrusted to the Dana L. Sweeny Funeral Home, 11213 Hwy 3, Lunenburg and from where a celebration of Bruce's life was held on Monday, September 28 at 1:00 pm with Rev. Neil McEwen officiating.

REMEMBER ME

Don't remember me with sadness,
Don't remember me with tears,
Remember all the laughs,
We've shared throughout the years.
Now I am contented,
That my life it was worthwhile,
Knowing that as I passed along the way,
I made somebody smile.
When you are walking down the street,
And you've got me on your mind,
I'm walking in your footsteps,
Only half a step behind.
So please don't be unhappy,
Just because I'm out of sight,
Remember that I'm with you,
Each morning, noon and night.

A Letter to our Customers

in Greenfield, Middlefield and Surrounding Communities

Thank you to everyone who joined us for our community reliability meeting in Greenfield on September 22, 2026. We appreciated the opportunity to meet with residents, answer your questions, address concerns, and share updates on the work to improve reliability in your area. We were also pleased to share the progress made since our last meeting in May 2025, including approximately $2.2 million in reliability improvements and an additional $5.8 million in planned investments to further strengthen the local electricity system.

We know reliable power is important to your homes, businesses, and daily lives, and we recognize the frustration outages can cause. While there is more work to do, the investments underway reflect our ongoing commitment to improving your power service and building a stronger, more resilient system for your community.

Reliability Improvements in Your Community

Recent investments in the Greenfield, Middlefield and surrounding areas have focused on strengthening the electricity grid through infrastructure upgrades, vegetation management and trimming and removing trees, replacing equipment, and installing protective devices. Together, these improvements are helping to reduce outages, improve restoration times and improve your overall power service. Investments included:

- The LaBelle Road reliability upgrade project - a $1.6 million investment that upgraded more than 5km of power lines (single phase to three phase), replaced aging poles and transformers, and installed modern protective devices, all to improve reliability.
- Proactively replacing aging electrical equipment, including poles, crossarms and insulators along Highway 210 between Greenfield and Middlefield, to help reduce equipment-related outages.
- Vegetation management – trimming and removing trees along nearly 8km of distribution power line between 2024 and 2026, addressing the leading cause of outages across Nova Scotia.
- Installing TripSaver devices which can automatically restore power following temporary interruptions, helping reduce both the number and length of outages.

Looking Ahead

Our work to strengthen reliability in your area continues, with approximately $5.8 million in additional reliability investments planned over the coming years. These investments include:

- Upgrades to the transmission line serving the Middlefield Substation, including transmission structures and equipment from Maitland Bridge to Middlefield and strengthening critical infrastructure.
- The Wellington Phase Addition project, which will upgrade the power lines with new wires, upgrade equipment and better support customer load along Highway 210 from Wellington to Buckfield improving long-term reliability and strengthening the local distribution system.
- Ongoing proactive maintenance and system improvements, including vegetation management, trimming and removing trees, replacing equipment, inspections, and other system upgrades designed to help prevent outages from happening.

Our Five-Year Reliability Plan (2025-2029)

We are in the second year of our reliability plan, which includes a $1.3 billion investment to further strengthen the electricity grid. This work involves an average annual investment of $250 million in projects across Nova Scotia, including installing protective devices, upgrading lines, replacing poles and transformers, and increasing vegetation management to reduce outages. Investment in tree trimming has steadily increased—from $25 million in 2022 to $32 million in 2023, and to $45 million annually since 2024.

Thank You

Hearing directly from customers is important to us and helps us better understand local concerns and priorities. We remain committed to keeping you informed as we continue to work to improve reliability in your community.

Sincerely,

Damian Daniels
Manager, Reliability Engagement, Nova Scotia Power

Locally Yours!

Five shorts in one great evening

By KEVIN MCBAIN
Kevin.mcbain@southshorebulletin.ca

BRIDGEWATER – The biennial production of Locally Yours will once again be hosted by the South Shore Players.

Five short plays, written by Nova Scotian playwrights will take place over two weekends, beginning Oct. 2 and continuing Oct. 3, 9 and 10 at 7 p.m. and Oct. 4 and 11 at 2 p.m.

On this year's list is Just Remains, by Mary Anne White; Ghostly Guest, by Teresa Patterson; Murder in the Station, by Wendy Oickle; Marjorie in the Storm, by Logan Kennedy; and Love in Christmas Harbour, by Issie Patterson.

Cynthia Myers, who is directing two of these plays, is over the top excited.

"The fact that it's happening through a community theatre company is one thing. It's inspiring and exciting to think there are five local writers, four local directors, close to 20 actors plus volunteers. To have that much local talent involved is really inspiring and exciting," she said.

"It's a full night of theatre and something for everyone – mystery, drama, really delicious comedy, physical comedy, verbal textured layered comedy...I think everyone will find something that they need."

Each play is between 12 and 25 minutes long. Cost is just $20 for the evening and can be purchased at: southshoreplayers.ca. Plays are recommended for those 13 years of age or older.

Myers explained a bit about how the process works – before getting on stage.

She said a script reading group is organized and they are sifted through to find appropriate players.

Directors are chosen and an open audition call for all age and are invited to do a cold read of partial scripts that the directors choose.

Then the "tricky" part comes...casting.

"One person may be wanted by more than one director and sometimes it becomes a game of give and take...and could this person may be do two roles? How can we provide opportunities for everyone who has come out?

"It's a very interesting process. I'm so honoured to have been asked to direct."

Hotels owners want to press pause on new tax

Queens has partnered with the association to create an online portal for reporting and fee remittance

• release the full April 2025 survey. The region received 97 responses to that poll and published the results online and in a staff report to council. Some 54 respondents said they own short-term rentals. And about two-thirds of them said they were strongly opposed.

In a staff report at council's July 14 meeting, project officer Richard Lane said there is no provision in the bylaw for exemptions for rooms booked before Oct. 1.

CAO Willa Thorpe told councillors at their Sept. 22 meeting that moving the implementation date would require the whole process to start over, because it would be a substantive change to the bylaw.

Deputy Mayor Maddie Charlton said some of the group's requests "would be really, really challenging."

"I can appreciate that we don't always get the communication right and we don't always execute as we intend to with providing everyone a seat at the table," she said.

"But I think we've done really well in making strides to improve that.... But recognizing that any deferral would take us back through that whole process again, that's not something I'm willing to open at this time."

Wentzell, who said the owners have "asked for way too much," pointed out that councillors wanted to tax short-term rentals to help combat the housing shortage in the region and to discourage people from buying properties just to use them as Airbnbs.

"These concerns coming to us right now from this joint submission are from the big boys, right? These are from big hotels. Not to underscore that, but when I look through some of the requests, they have exemptions for non-tourism stays, like contractors. Like, come on."

He said councillors' hands were tied because of the timing of the operators' concerns. But he said they should be consulted on setting the terms of reference for the advisory committee.

Christian said council can address the "valid concerns" in the letter with amendments after the bylaw takes effect. And he said the intention of the levy was to spur economic growth and be a net benefit for all businesses in Queens County.

"My concern with having several of the major operators articulating their opposition to certain elements of the levy at the eleventh hour, it feels like we're getting off on the wrong foot in implementation of the accommodations levy. I think it would be helpful to give ourselves more time, ... but it would be very arduous, time consuming and set us back several months if we'd have to pull back on the bylaw completely and start the bylaw approval process right from the start, just to change the effective date from Oct. 1, 2026. From my perspective, that's problematic."
